"Say not, 'The days are evil. Who's to blame?'
And fold the hands and acquiesce —oh shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name."

President Coolidge sees Nick Longworth's three cruisers and raises him a disarmament conference.

Young fellow, in his early thirties, named Tom Edison, blew into Washington one day in the long ago with a contraption called a talking machine that he was going to explain to the Bulgingbrows of the Smithsonian, and the reporter who went down to write up the big joke commented upon the inventor's good health. "Yes," said Edison, "I feel as well as I ever did in my life and I expect to live to be fifty." With that knack of his of somehow always managing to deliver more than the goods, he celebrates today his 80th birthday, and thus do we perceive how 50 years have changed our conception of what constitutes an old man.

Gen. Chang says the northern army will pursue the Reds clear to Canton, or, as we would put it, "On to Richmond!"

Everybody in New York now seems to want to close up the smut plays except the long lines of cash customers waiting at the box-office.

With the lawlessness of a bootlegger or a highwayman some woodchopper laboring under the impression that he is above the law fells two grand old Norway maples that obstructed the entrance to a new garage in New York avenue, and it is hereby moved and seconded that the fines now being collected from our arboreal bandits be used to replace them in the identical places with the largest trees available. To paraphrase Joyce Kilmer—

God grows the trees to shade the town,
But any fool can cut them down.

The twenty-first regular quarterly Portuguese revolution adjourns subject to the call of the chairman.

At this stage of the proceedings in Grant's administration there was considerably more third-term maneuvering than is going on at present, and Grant was a military hero with the soldier vote solid behind him, but at the Cincinnati convention of 1876 the General's name wasn't even presented, and the grand prize went to an inconspicuous gentleman whom nobody was figuring on. The Republican party today can't boast any Shermans or Blaines, but it must be admitted it's rich in Rutherford B. Hayeses.

It is indeed interesting to observe third-term opposition coming from the Progressive ranks. Is the Bull Moose party going to "shame its raising?"

The McNary-Haugen urban hold-up bill for the relief of a few terrorized politicians at the expense of every man, woman and child in the country, including the farmers themselves, comes up for a vote at 4 o'clock, and according to the diagnosis of the alienists it's going to be passed.

As Lina Cavalieri's Virginia brother-in-law might wire to Mr. Harold F. McCormick, "Who's looney now?"

The President's recommendation for another disarmament conference renders imperative the passage of the bill providing for three new cruisers — it's a foolish trader who goes to market with an empty bag.

Mr. John W. Hubbard, the well-known Pittsburgh manufacturer, shovels out $50,000 to Miss Anne Caldwell. There's nothing like knowing how to dig.

While statesmen work themselves into a lather over the preservation of Lafayette Square, the truth of the matter is that since the Cosmos Club has made a stuccoed nightmare out of Dolly Madison's quaint old brick house, there are only two structures of historic interest worth preserving, St. John's church, which, please God, will always stand there in the simplicity of its beauty, and the Decatur house, now crowded by encroaching business. The Square must be improved in the modern spirit, not by ancestor worshipers.

Now that the Republicans have organized the Order of Elephants, what's delaying the Democrats in countering with the Order of the Jackass?

WU TO BLOCK DRIVE OF NORTHERN ARMY ON SOUTHERN CHINA

Chang's Troops Warned to Stop at Border of His Province.

AMERICA LANDS 300 MARINES IN SHANGHAI

British Agreement With Chen on Hankow Concession Is Reported Reached.

Shanghai, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Marshal Wu Pei-fu, once lord of central China, has requested Marshal Chang Tso-lin, of the northern war lord's alliance, to state the number of troops he is sending into Honan province and to refrain from advancing beyond Changteh, near its northern border, said Japanese dispatches from Peking.

If the troops of Chang stopped at Changteh, added Wu, significantly, he would endeavor to arrange an understanding between his troops and the northerners, thus avoiding possible conflict.

Campaign for Hankow.

Peking, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Marshal Chang Tso-lin, head of the alliance of northern war lords, announced today that its great campaign had begun in the war of the north against the south.

Armies of Chihli and Shangung provinces of the Peking government, said Chang, have begun the long-expected advance to recapture Hankow from the invading nationalist (Cantonese) forces, and drive them southward from their new capital on the Yangtse river in central China.

The northern armies will not halt at the Yangtse, said Chang's pronouncement, but will pursue the Cantonese through Hunan province to Canton, in Kwangtung province, whence the southerners erupted last spring in a victorious campaign that gave them control over half of China.

In telegrams to leaders of the northern armies, Chang Tso-Lin, long dictator of Manchuria and in recent months director of the Peking government's policies, vigorously denounced Feng Yu-Hsiang, some times styled "the Christian general," and Chang Kai-Shek, general-in-chief of the Cantonese forces, who are allied against the northern war lords. Feng Yu-Hsiang, founder of the kuominchun (national people's army), of the Peking government which Chang Tso-Lin aided in deposing last April, recently showed considerable strength and activity in Honan province and attempted a junction with Cantonese armies.

Denounces Wu Pei Fu.

Announcing his campaign, Chang Tso-Lin said he had received many requests from Hunan and Hupeh for relief from Cantonese domination and was most anxious to assist. Marshal Wu Pei-Fu had prevented his acting, asserted Chang Tso-Lin, that erstwhile central China war lord and northern ally who had made himself responsible for the recapture of Hankow having remained ineffective for six months in Honan province. Moreover, said Chang, Wu's forces had interposed obstacles to block the passage of other northern troops.

Telegrams from Chang Tso-Lin to generals of Wu Pei-Fu, which announced the beginning of the southward drive of the armies of the north, requested the cooperation of the Wu

1 Killed, 2 Entombed By Mine Explosion

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—One man is known to be dead, two others entombed and two seriously burned in an explosion of gas at the Phoenix Park colliery of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co. today.

The body of Stiney Sedlick, of Minersville, was recovered, and rescue gangs were working in an effort to reach those entombed. It is said, however, there is little likelihood of their being rescued alive.

MERTON SAYS WILLIAMS HAD HIM REVISE CLAIM

Told to Stress Nonenemy Ownership, Daugherty Case Witness Testifies.

PHONE GIRLS ON STAND

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The government played its "ace" in the Daugherty-Miller trial today.

Richard Merton, German metal magnate, once indicted with Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, for conspiracy to defraud the government of their unbiased services, was called to tell his story of the transfer of the $7,000,000 assets of the American Metals Co., seized in the war as enemy-owned property, from the alien property custodian to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeurs de Metaux.

Merton related that he came to the United States in 1921 to see if he could have the American Metals Co.'s assets released to the Societe Suisse, for which he was agent. He said he met John T. King, one-time national Republican committeeman from Connecticut, and told him his mission.

King, he said, told him he could help him, that services of a lawyer were not necessary in having the claim allowed. Then King introduced him to Jess W. Smith, Daugherty's handyman. Later on, Merton said, he was introduced to Miller, but he could not recall whether King or Smith did the introducing. Miller, he said, told him he had just been installed as alien property custodian and didn't know much about the affairs of that office, but that if he would come to Washington he would be turned over to an authority on alien property matters.

So Merton went to Washington, met Miller again and was turned over to G. E. Williams, Miller's assistant. Wil-

Shanghai Firm Buys Isle in Philippines

Manila, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—J. J. Danon, Manila broker, returned here today from Shanghai, where he said he had sold Fuga island, a small piece of land in the extreme north of the Philippine group, to a Shanghai real estate company for $75,000.

The owner of the island, Vincent Maeigan, of Manila, is said to hold a somewhat clouded title to the land, and this may prevent closing of the deal. The island contains about 37,000 acres.

Miami Club Raids Reveal No Gambling

Miami, Fla., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Eight night clubs and music halls in Miami and Miami Beach were visited early today by county officers in continuation of an antigambling campaign which started Monday night.

The sorties started at midnight, when an automobile load of deputy sheriffs toured Miami Beach before swinging back to the outlying sections of Miami for a series of incursions on the fashionable cabarets. No gambling devices were found and no arrests were made.

A second visit to the Evelyn Nesbit Supper club in Hialeah, operated by the former wife of Harry K. Thaw, revealed the place in darkness, as on the previous night.

TESTIMONY IN FORD TAX SUIT QUESTIONS TREASURY MOTIVES

Government in 1922 Had All Facts It Now Has, Appellants Claim.

LETTER OF WATSON IS PLACED IN RECORD

Blair and Nash Are Witnesses at Trial; U. S. to Begin Defense Monday.

Documents and testimony which it was hoped would definitely impugn the propriety of the government's effort to levy an additional $31,000,000 tax assessment on former minority stockholders of the Ford Motor Co. were placed in the records of the hearings on the tax suit before the board of tax appeals yesterday by counsel for the former stockholders.

The testimony concluded the case of the stockholders and the hearings were adjourned until Monday morning when the government will begin presentation of its case under the direction of Alexander W. Gregg, chief counsel of the bureau of internal revenue.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue David H. Blair and his principal assistant, C. R. Nash, were witnesses summoned by the stockholders, but their testimony did not develop into any sensational disclosures.

Watson Urged Inquiry.

Counsel for the stockholders did develop, however, that Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, one of the leaders of the regular Republicans in the Senate, sought to have the internal revenue bureau reopen the tax case against Senator Couzens, of Michigan, one of the former stockholders.

A letter written by Senator Watson in February, 1922, was sent to Commissioner Blair at the latter's residence inclosing a Treasury memorandum in which the government's original evaluation of the Ford stock was questioned. This was got into the record, together with a reply from Commissioner Blair that another investigation of the stock value would be conducted through different channels than had been employed previously.

Although the reading of the Watson letter and the reply was without comment elaborating on possible motives which might have prompted the Indiana Senator's action, Senator Couzens' statement off the record, was not so meager of explanation.

Ford Opposed Newberry.

Mr. Ford, Senator Couzens said, had been the opponent of Senator Newberry, and when the hue and cry began over the Newberry expenditures in the election, Senator Watson probably thought it would be good politics to institute a backfire by starting the government on a course involving Ford's stock. The case again was reopened by the Treasury, as it had been before that time, but later in 1922 was closed as approved.

The case was reopened and brought to a head again in 1925 after he had made his campaign against the internal revenue bureau, Senator Couzens said. In the course of this attack Senator Couzens declared Secretary Mellon should reopen tax cases involving com-

All Coal Legislation Tabled by Committee

1,000 Dead or Injured As Portugal Revolt Ends

London, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Portugal's twenty-first or twenty-third revolution since it became a republic in 1910, according to whether some minor affairs are counted or not, has ended with victory for the regime of Gen. Carmona, the dictator—for how long time alone will tell.

The Carmona forces last night shelled the insurgents out of their last stronghold in Lisbon, the naval arsenal, and compelled them to surrender. The white flag was then flying on the marine barracks.

With the Oporto revolt also suppressed with iron hand, the country now can settle down and count the cost. In the six days of civil warfare, during which both Lisbon and Oporto were bombarded, the casualties were heavy. Estimates vary largely, but the aggregate is likely to be more than 1,000 killed or wounded, combatants and noncombatants, while many of the fine public buildings in both cities were ruined by shellfire. Several insurgent leaders were killed or imprisoned; one of them, a former war minister, Americo Olava, is reported to have been assassinated.

Crowds of sightseers, special dispatches say, swarmed through the bombarded parts of Lisbon today to inspect the damage, and they agreed that the Praca do Brazil, where the insurgent headquarters was situated, suffered most.

HOUSE VOTE ASKED DISAPPROVING THIRD TERM FOR COOLIDGE

Progressive Republican's Resolution Like One in Grant's Time.

CITES JEFFERSON'S CONSTITUTION VIEWS

Beck Says He Will Press for Roll Call at Next Session, if Necessary.

By NORMAN W. BAXTER.

A change of battle front brought the third-term issue before the House of Representatives yesterday instead of the Senate and shifted authorship of the move from the Democratic to the progressive Republican ranks.

Representative J. D. Beck, Republican, of Wisconsin, introduced a resolution, identical in language with the one that the lower branch of Congress adopted in the Grant administration, expressing the opinion of the House that any departure from the tradition established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States would be "unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Accompanying the resolution Representative Beck issued a statement in which he pointed out the precedents against occupancy of the White House for more than eight years, and cited in addition, the words of Thomas Jefferson in his autobiography which, Mr. Beck said, showed that it was not the intention of the framers of the Constitution to perpetuate any man in the highest office in the land.

He referred also to the words of Abraham Lincoln, recorded by his wife, that it was the intention of the civil war President to retire at the end of his second term.

Possibility of Vote Remote.

Introduction of the resolution in the House is not likely to provoke the same field for political discussion that would have been offered had it come up in the Senate. The possibility that the House will even consider, much less vote on the resolution at this session, is remote, but its introduction in the Senate was still being considered yesterday.

"For 140 years," said Mr. Beck, "the chief executives of this nation—Federalists, Democrats, Whigs and Republicans—have uniformly observed the tradition of retiring at the end of two terms in the White House.

"Numerous statements have appeared in the press in recent months advancing the argument that since the present occupant of the White House will have served only six years on March 4, 1929, the third-term tradition should not be raised as a bar to his reelection in 1928.

"The complete answer to this argument is found in this indisputable fact: If reelected in 1928, President Coolidge will serve until March 4, 1933, or ten years from the time that he first took the oath of office or assumed the Presidency in August, 1923. His reelection would destroy the third-term tradition of 140 years' standing as completely as if it had never existed.

Tells of Other Presidents.

"He would occupy the first office in our government establishments, clothed with greater powers than ever have been attached to it in all our history, two years longer than the nine great Presidents who have heretofore served

ANTIEVOLUTION ACTS FAIL IN TWO STATES

Arkansas Senators Table Bill; New Hampshire's Measure Is Dropped.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—By an overwhelming viva voce vote the Arkansas Senate today tabled the antievolution bill which passed the House by a margin of three votes yesterday. The bill was designed to prohibit teaching the theory of evolution in State-supported schools.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The State house of representatives without debate today killed the antievolution bill. The House accepted the adverse report of the committee on education. The bill would have prohibited the teaching of the theory of evolution in the State schools.

Chaplin Again Loses Fight on Receivership

Los Angeles, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—A second attack by attorneys for Charles Spencer Chaplin upon the receivership appointed to protect the interests of Lita Grey Chaplin in her divorce suit was unsuccessful today when Judge Walton Wood denied a motion of Alfred Reeves, manager of the Chaplin studios.

Reeves' motion demanded that the receivership be vacated, contending that his personal business is being hampered. Attorneys for Mrs. Chaplin argued that the court had ample authority to order receivership at its discretion in a divorce case, and cited as authority a decision in the case of "an absconding defendant."

NEW NAVAL ARMS LIMIT PROPOSED TO BIG POWERS BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

London Press Welcomes American Arms Proposal

Paris Gratified by Recognition of French Position on Need of Minor Ships—Mussolini Promises to Study Coolidge Plan.

London, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—A cordial welcome is extended to the armament proposals of President Coolidge by some of the London morning papers in their editorials, but several of them do not comment. Thus far there has been no comment from government officials.

The Westminster Gazette says:

"President Coolidge's overture is most timely. There should be no doubt of Great Britain's willingness to meet the suggestions sympathetically."

The Daily Chronicle, while stressing the complexity of the whole disarmament problem, welcomes the proposal, saying:

"It would immensely assist the larger task of the preparatory commission if the five principal naval powers could complete an agreement where agreement was clearly possible."

The Daily Express, while favoring disarmament, is despondent regarding its achievement and dwells on the failure of previous attempts.

"We appreciate the nobility of President Coolidge's sentiments," says the Express, "but what is really wanted is a formula to permanently cure nations of their warlike intentions."

Paris, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—President Coolidge's proposal that the Washington agreement relative to capital ships be extended to other naval armaments has taken Paris unawares. The French government has been favorable thus far to every reduction in armaments compatible with security, it was remarked at the foreign office this evening, but before a definite opinion could be given on Washington's latest suggestion, the memorandum must be translated and studied.

France, it was added, had shown her interest in disarmament by insisting in the face of certain opposition on

INJUNCTION HALTS RAIDS ON NEW YORK THEATERS

Producers of "Sex," "Captive" and "Virgin Man" Get Court Protection.

SEATS ARE BEING SOLD

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Producers of three New York plays which were closed last night by police obtained injunctions today restraining the authorities from interfering with the productions and announced their intention of continuing performances as usual at least the rest of the week. Two of the injunctions are returnable Monday and the third Tuesday.

From Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee, at whose behest the three shows were raided, came the statement that no further interference with the productions had been intended until a prima facie case could be made against the defendants.

Producers and managers of "The Captive" and "The Virgin Man" will be arraigned Monday afternoon and the "Sex" defendants Tuesday afternoon.

The injunction orders signed by Supreme Court Justices Aaron J. Levy and Louis D. Valente are returnable Monday in the cases of "Sex" and "The Captive" and Tuesday for "The Virgin Man."

A scheduled matinee of "The Virgin Man" did not take place today, the box office announcing the performance was put off because of the illness of the heroine, Dorothy Hall. Seats for the evening performance, however, were being sold.

While the acting mayor, District Attorney Banton, producers and actors were busy making statements, the long-awaited plan of the committee of nine was divulged in its entirety.

The plan includes a play jury of seven and a supervision board of nine, the latter composed of theater folk.

Verdicts of the play jury would be final, and enforceable through the Ac-

$50,000 to Lawyers In Suit Over $80

Chicago, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The suit of the W. A. Schaeffer Fountain Pen Co. for a judgment of $80 against the Sidney Morris & Co., in which it is estimated $50,000 will be spent for counsel by the litigants, neared its end today after three days of testimony in municipal court.

The Schaeffer Co. seeks judgment amounting to the value of twenty fountain pens which it is alleged the defendant company sold in violation of a contract specifying the pens must be retailed at a certain price.

Three survivors of the collier Calava, which foundered between Newcastle and Sydney, were here today recovering from exposure and attacks by "Portuguese men of war," a species of shark. Three of the crew are known to have been drowned and four are missing. The survivors reached shore after swimming 12 miles through shark-infested waters.

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—President Luiz has lifted the state of siege in Matto Grosso and Goyaz, thereby completing the gradual reduction of territory under emergency control. This has been exercised over a large portion of Brazil since the Sao Paulo revolution of 1924.

EXAMPLE OF BUS MEN COSTS TWO MORE TREES

Beautiful Maples Are Felled at New York Avenue and Thirteenth Street.

SMALL FINE CONDEMNED

Clifford Lanham, District superintendent of trees and planting, yesterday announced that the example of employes of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. in hacking trees in public spaces has been followed and that two large and beautiful Norway maples were cut down in front of the large garage that is in process of construction where the old Hall of the Ancients stood at New York avenue and Thirteenth street northwest. He said he would prosecute.

"But the fine is only $50 per tree," he said. "It is a shame. It probably was deemed worth $100 to some one to have the trees out of the way."

Lanham said the firm of contractors erecting the garage asked permission to remove the trees to make way for a large entrance. The permission was denied and plans for the building were altered to provide for an entrance on each side. One of his inspectors yesterday reported to him that the trees were felled and the entrance was being completed according to the original plan.

Complaint was made also by Lanham yesterday that only four informations had been filed against C. S. Putnam, an employe of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., who headed a gang of workmen of the bus concern that lopped branches off 80 Norway maples after midnight January 25, from the top of a double-decked bus. This would permit a maximum fine of only $200, whereas a $50 fine for each tree hacked would be $4,000.

Lanham complained to the corporation counsel's office, and it was dis-

Conference at Geneva Is Suggested to Check Cruiser Building.

SENATORS DOUBTFUL OF PLAN'S SUCCESS

Appeal to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan Is Submitted to Congress.

BORAH IN SYMPATHY, BUT VOICES PESSIMISM

Notes Ask Parley of Agents With Full Powers to Negotiate Treaty.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Coolidge has now actively sought to assume leadership in a world movement for further limitation of naval armaments.

An appeal to the chief naval powers to meet America in conference at Geneva was yesterday communicated officially to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, and the President transmitted the text of the appeal, with an accompanying message, to the Congress.

The message came as a surprise and evoked widely divergent comment at the Capitol, whole-hearted indorsements vieing with some critical and satirical expressions. The consensus among Senate leaders, especially members of the foreign relations committee, is that the appeal will not bring practical results.

Members of the Senate naval affairs committee and others noted the fact that the message and the appeal were so timed as to command attention while America's three-cruiser building program is a subject of conference—adjustment between the Senate and the House, the upper body having insisted upon appropriations for these ships despite the House vote and despite the President's expressed wishes.

There was a tendency, therefore, to view the message from two distinct angles, its international aspect and its possible effect on the attempt of Congress to force the President's hand in the matter of the American naval program. The international phase is regarded by diplomats as by far the most important.

Asks Special Conference.

Stripped of diplomatic verbiage, the President's appeal to the powers simply asks them to supplement the long drawn out and vexatious discussions of the Geneva preparatory disarmament commission with a special conference between the naval powers which would deal with limitations affecting cruisers, auxiliary craft, submarines, none of which were regulated by the Washington arms conference of 1921-22.

America asks that representatives with plenipotentiary power be named to actually enter into conference and negotiate a treaty, providing for the desired ends. Meanwhile the discussions of the preparatory commission at Geneva could proceed along the lines already mapped out, it is suggested.

This commission meets at Geneva on March 21 next and Hugh Gibson, newly appointed American Ambassador to Belgium and formerly American Minister to Switzerland, will be there to continue his work as America's representative. But the President points out that there is little likelihood of a general conference on disarmament being called this year as a result of the labors of the preparatory commission, and there is a hint in the President's message that he does not expect this commission to achieve any constructive result. Thus, in one sense Mr. Coolidge is asking the powers to abandon reliance on the plan now in operation and cooperate with him in a new and more restricted program.

Attitude of Powers Unknown.

It will not be possible to ascertain whether the powers will heed the President's appeal until replies have been received from London, Paris, Rome and Toyko. The present plan has not progressed to the point where announcement can be made that the conference along Coolidge lines will be held. Announcement with respect to the holding of the Washington arms conference was made on August 11, 1921, after the invited powers had accepted America's invitation.

It is the custom to sound out governments before inviting them to an international conference and the assumption therefore is that Secretary of State Kellogg has been in communication with the governments to which the President has now appealed and that these governments have not been adverse to receiving such appeals. Ordinarily this would imply that the governments would accept the invitation as a matter of course because otherwise they would ask that the invitation be not extended. But the wording of the President's message suggests that all of the powers in this case have not yet indicated a willingness to accept. However, diplomats incline to the belief that there is much

PACIFISTS AND REDS ASSAILED BITTERLY BY WOMEN PATRIOTS

Liberalism Today Means Aiding Cause of Communists, Mrs. Robinson Says.

ARMY TRAINING IN ALL SCHOOLS IS ADVOCATED

Peace-Time Preparedness Is Held Necessary to Avert Huge Loss in War.

Professional pacifists, red and pink communists, and socialists and liberals were raked over the coals of scorn at yesterday's session of the women's patriotic conference on national defense, held in Memorial Continental hall.

Mrs. B. L. Robinson, of the Public Service League of Boston, told the representatives of the 29 organizations at the conference that the term "liberal" had lost its original meaning.

"A liberal now," she said, "is one who greases the tracks on the downward road to communism."

She declared that radicals had found their way into church pulpits, into schools and into clubs and were poisoning the minds of America's youth. If real American mothers would keep their children away from such churches and such schools and clubs, Mrs. Robinson said, it again might become "fashionable to be a patriot."

Likens One to Other.

Joseph R. Cashman, a New York attorney, told the delegates that "socialists and communists are one and the same thing." Both, he said, seek to destroy marriage and religion and the American form of government.

Communists, Mr. Cashman said, are not always from Moscow, even though their theories originate there. Most of them in this country, he said, were born here, and said he knew of at least one whose ancestors came over in the Mayflower. He warned that unless patriotic Americans, especially the women, begin fighting the propaganda of the communists, an "autocracy of the gutter" would be set up in this country.

Paul V. McNutt, dean of the law school of the University of Indiana, told of the attempts that are being made to abolish military training in American schools and colleges. Justifying military training, he declared that more than half of the American battle casualties in the world war were due to the nation's failure to prepare in time of peace. The agitation of students against military training, he said, had been inspired by printed propaganda and professional propagandists.

Would Equalize Hardships.

Representative J. J. McSwain, of South Carolina, delivered an address in which he urged legislation which would equalize the obligations and hardships of war. He said that he was opposed to the suggestion that laborers, shipbuilders and the like be conscripted, but he felt that war profits should be done away with as far as possible and that taxes should be high enough to permit of a "pay as you fight" policy.

Mrs. R. R. Holloway, of the Daughters of 1812, of Baltimore, denounced the critics who have attacked the "Star-Spangled Banner," and called on the delegates to use their influence to have the song proclaimed by Congress as America's national anthem.

The American War Mothers, one of the 29 organizations represented at the conference, staged a patriotic educational night at the new National museum last night. In the principal address, Mrs. H. H. McCluer, national president, denied that war was always wicked, as some pacifists have claimed. She quoted a well known book on theology to show that "war is righteous in defense of the national freedom."

Know War's Horrors.

No organization of women is more conversant with the horrors of war and more desirous of peace than the war mother, the speaker said, but at the same time no organization is a greater foe to the socialists and communists who would like to see the United States unprepared for a war if one should come.

The United States Army band furnished music. The services were opened with the singing of "America" by the audience. Capt. Milton O. Beebe, U. S. A., the chaplain, said the invocation and the benediction.

Miss Phyllis Price and Robert Davidson, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Carl Chindblom, sang. Pupils of the fifth grade of the Park View platoon school, under the direction of Miss Grace G. Meyer, presented a flag exercise. Col. James A. Moss, director general of the United States Flag association, and Mrs. H. H. McCluer, national president of the War Mothers, spoke. Mrs. E. C. Wagner, department president of the District, presided.

Col. Hanford MacNider, Assistant Secretary of War, told the delegates at the morning session that industrial preparedness was just as vital as military preparedness in this country. Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur described life in the navy, picturing the modern battleship as a university, where young Americans are made better morally, physically and mentally.

Representative Florence P. Kahn, of California, decried the habit of poking fun at Congress, declaring it created disrespect for the institutions of the nation in general. Mrs. Adalin Wright Macauley, national president of the American Legion auxiliary, and also permanent chairman of the conference, spoke on the purposes of the conference. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery.

At 12:30 o'clock today the delegates will be received at the White House by President Coolidge.

Night Flight of Bombers To Be Radioed by Planes

Washington radio fans will hear of the progress of a night flight by two bombardment formations of Martin bomber planes which will journey here from Langley field, Va., tonight or tomorrow night.

Seated in their homes, the local radio audience will be able to hear of the progress of the planes from the time the six bombers leave Langley field until they arrive at Bolling field, after accomplishing their mission.

The exact night of the flight will not be announced by the army air corps, the only information available is that either tonight or tomorrow night the bombers will take off and wing their way to Washington. On the night the flight is made, the planes will leave Langley at 6:30 o'clock or about a half hour after sunset.

They will fly in two formations of three and almost as soon as they are in the air, one of the fliers will begin the radio broadcast. He will be in constant radio telephone communication with both Langley and Bolling fields, where air corps officers will make notes on the progress of the flight.

These reports will be broadcast on a 340-meter wave length and should be audible to radio audiences within a radio of at least 100 miles from the city. The expedition is scheduled to finish its work by 8:15 o'clock, when the fliers will alight at Bolling field.

The purpose of the flight is to give pilots in the second bombardment group at Langley practical knowledge of night navigation and night formation flying. The planes will be fully equipped with parachute flares and electric landing lights so as to insure safety should forced landings be necessary.

Owing to illness, Mr. Flemming did not accept the invitation of the Senate to testify, but in a published statement denied the charges.

SWEDISH PRINCE TO GIVE BIG-GAME TALK TONIGHT

William, Second Son of Ruler, Will Be Received by Coolidge.

ALSO FAMOUS EXPLORER

Prince William, second son of King Gustaf V of Sweden, arrived quietly in Washington yesterday for a brief visit of a little more than 24 hours.

The chief event of the prince's stay will be a lecture he will give at 8 o'clock tonight in the Washington auditorium before members of the National Geographic society. The prince is famous as an explorer and hunter of big game, and his subject tonight will be his experiences in tropical Africa.

The lecture will not be without its thrills. The prince will illustrate his talk with slides and motion pictures. One scene in particular will show how narrowly the prince escaped the clutches of a 450-pound gorilla which was within two steps of tearing the royal hunter to pieces when he shot him dead.

Prince William led the Swedish zoological expedition and obtained thousands of specimens for one of the leading Swedish museums. The pictures also will show the quaint customs of the pygmies and other African natives.

The prince arrived here yesterday from Newark, N. J., at 3:20 o'clock, and remained at the Swedish legation on R street except to go to the British embassy for tea at 5 o'clock. He was accompanied here by Helge Johnson, master of the royal hounds, and a friend of the prince.

Today he will go sightseeing, accompanied by the Swedish Minister, W. Bostrom, and at 5 o'clock he will be received by President Coolidge at the White House. He will depart late tonight for Newcastle, Pa. The prince arrived in this country January 5, and will remain until late in March.

He is 43 years old, and is as tall as Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus, whose tour of this country with the crown princess was an event of last spring.

covered that Putnam already had entered pleas of guilty in the four cases and the matter was to come up in police court Wednesday at 11 a. m. The police court prosecutor was instructed to drop the four charges, thus disposing of the pleas of guilty and file them over again with additional informations pertaining to every tree concerning which he could find evidence. It was stated in the District building that as heavy a penalty as could be exacted was desired.

Director of Traffic M. O. Eldridge and Lanham unofficially indicated yesterday that they are inclined to recommend against the petition filed Wednesday by a score of residents and business houses asking removal of the trees in the middle of New York avenue between Ninth and Thirteenth streets northwest.

"That is one of the most beautiful rows of trees in the city," said Eldridge. "It would have to be a great traffic need, indeed, that would move me to recommend their removal."

Lanham said they were American elms, probably 45 years old, and that it would be difficult to replace them with young trees that would grow to anything like their beauty under street conditions existing today.

Police to Make Drive On Red Light Stealers

The police force yesterday was instructed to halt the theft of red lanterns, owned by the Potomac Electric Power Co. Thefts numbered 1,200 last year, as many as 25 having been reported stolen in one night. Many of them have been commandeered by motorists to serve as parking lights, it is said.

This was the tenor of a general order issued yesterday by Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police. The order said the power company is compelled by regulations to use approximately 4,000 lanterns in excavation work, to warn persons from falling into holes.

Police were instructed to "pay special attention" to the holes to prevent theft of the red lights and to investigate when a kerosene lantern is seen on a parked car, to ascertain if it bears the stamped legend, "Property of the P. E. P. Co."

11 FIRE ALARMS SOUND DURING 2-HOUR PERIOD

Two-Thirds of City's Apparatus Ordered Out by False Calls.

$5,000 DAMAGE IN BLAZE

Eleven fire alarms were sounded in various sections of the city last night between 10:14 o'clock and 12:15 o'clock, calling out nearly two-thirds of the city's fire apparatus. Nine of the alarms were false. The box pulled at 11:07 o'clock was for a fire at the home of Walter Skinner, 2334 High street southeast. The fire, which started in the kitchen of the frame house from a defective stove, burned out the rear of the house, causing approximately $5,000 damage.

Skinner and his wife were asleep when the fire started. They were aroused by the smoke and made their way to safety before the flames reached their bedroom. The house is owned by Alvin C. Ogle, former policeman, who resigned from the force when his weight went over 300 pounds.

Fire companies Nos. 7, 12, 24, 6, 4, 13, 16, the fire boat and truck companies 4 and 10 bore the brunt of answering the false alarms. Box 416 at Twelfth and Water streets southwest was pulled twice in 29 minutes. While police were searching for the persons who pulled the first false alarm at this box they pulled the box again.

When fire companies 7, 12 and 24 called headquarters to report the alarm at Fourth and W streets northwest, at 10:54 o'clock, was false, they were ordered to First and Bryant streets northwest, on another false alarm. When they reached the box there, they called in to report the alarm false and were then ordered to Second and Adams streets northwest, where another false alarm was pulled. Half an hour previous to the last alarm, fire companies 7, 12 and 6 answered a false alarm at Fourth and Elm streets northwest.

NEW FEUD FLARE-UP IN COURT IS FEARED

Large Posse to Guard Trio Today at Hearing in Triple Slaying.

Danville, Va., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The traditional law among mountain folk that they should settle their disputes in their own way will be eclipsed by the law of Virginia at Patrick county courthouse tomorrow when Ernest Hall, Ora Turner and Frank Chaney are given hearings on charges growing out of the triple homicide in the Fayerdale section last Sunday. The possibility of a flare-up, however, will be reckoned with by the authorities.

Turner Hall and David and Maynard Cox, brothers, were killed in the shooting affray which authorities declared was the outgrowth of rivalry in moonshining operations.

The hearing will provide the occasion for the rival groups to come in close contact for the first time since Sunday and precautions will be taken to prevent a renewal of the trouble. Sheriff Mays will have a strong force of deputies scattered through the courtroom at the request of Commonwealth's Attorney F. P. Burton.

Ten witnesses have been summoned. The State's attorney said he will seek only to show sufficient cause for holding the three accused men for the grand jury. The defense, it was stated today, will offer no evidence. Three justices will preside at the hearing.

MAN AND WOMAN SOUGHT IN 2 BLACKMAIL CASES

Fulton R. Gordon Is Asked for $10,000 and Marcus Notes for $5,000.

FAIL TO COLLECT BILLS

Detectives hope to question today a man and a woman in connection with threatening letters, demanding large sums of money, sent three days ago through the mails to Fulton R. Gordon, wealthy real estate man of Chevy Chase, and to Marcus Notes, wealthy owner of a chain of motion picture houses, of 1400 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

The woman, of middle age, whom police are seeking, is said to be the same woman who, about six months ago, attempted to cash a forged check for $1,500, bearing Mr. Gordon's name, at the Riggs National Bank.

The man, police say, is a "small-time" real estate operator, who is always known to be "pinched for funds."

The police, Mr. Gordon and Mr. Notes all regard the threats of disaster if they failed to deliver the money as a bluff by the perpetrator of the blackmail.

Mr. Gordon, in describing the letter received by him, last night said it appeared as if the paper containing the demand and threats had been torn from a memorandum book. A demand for $10,000 in cash was printed in ink. The money was supposed to have been left in the refrigerator in a vacant apartment on the third floor of 1538 Monroe street northwest. Failure to comply with the demands would result in a "castroph," the letter said.

Mr. Notes received a similar letter, except that it demanded $5,000 instead of the $10,000 asked of Mr. Gordon.

Detectives Brodie and Varney, who are investigating the case, went to the designated apartment early yesterday, left a large bundle of marked bills and watched for the blackmailer to appear, but no one came to claim the money.

BOULDER DAM GROUP WILL PLEAD FOR BILL

Longworth to Be Asked to Intercede for House Action in Measure.

Hope that Congress will pass the Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill at this session is beginning to dwindle. Notwithstanding the poor outlook for passage, however, sponsors of the bill oppose the suggestion that an emergency appropriation be requested to meet the menace of floods in the Imperial valley.

Representative Swing, of California, coauthor of the bill, said yesterday that supporters of the bill will call on Speaker Longworth today and ask him to intercede with the House rules committee to give the measure a chance to come up for action.

The action of the State of Utah in withdrawing from the Colorado river compact is one of the chief reasons the rules committee has failed to give the Swing-Johnson bill the legislative right of way, Chairman Smith, of the irrigation committee, declared yesterday. If Utah had not withdrawn, he said, the rules committee would have placed the bill on the legislative program for this session some days ago.

Suspects Arrested In Holdup of Taxicab

With the arrest last night of William E. Pinkney, 22 years old, and Walter W. Dyson, 21, both colored, of Sheridan road southeast, police of the Eleventh precinct believe they have cleared up several recent holdups. The men were arrested by Detective Charles A. Berry and Policemen Brooks and Stewart, of the Eleventh precinct, on information furnished by Harry Alex, a taxicab driver who identified them as the ones who robbed him Tuesday night of $16 at the point of a gun.

When arrested, Pinkney and Dyson admitted they held up Alex in an isolated section of Anacostia, police said. They took police to the spot where they had thrown away the guns they said they used in the holdup. The guns were found. Police are holding Pinkney and Dyson for investigation at the Eleventh precinct station. Detective Berry said the men would be charged after police investigated other robberies that have occurred during the last few weeks.

REELECT COOLIDGE, SAYS FORD; LAUDS MODERN MOTHERS

Flappers Know How to Take Care of Selves; Wives Better Than Ever.

AUTO MAN WILL VISIT EDISON ON BIRTHDAY

Electrical Wizard 80 Today; Day to Be Passed Much as Any Other One.

Special to The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—"In 1928 give us Calvin Coolidge for President again."

That, in effect, was Henry Ford's thought as he sat in his private car at Broad Street station today and for more than half an hour spoke on a variety of subjects—business, politics, flappers and American manhood. He was en route to Orange, N. J., where tomorrow he will help his old friend Thomas A. Edison celebrate his eightieth birthday. That the automobile manufacturer is an ardent admirer of the President and a stanch advocate of his reelection was indicated by the emphasis with which he expressed the hope Coolidge would be reelected.

"I suppose you would like to see him President for another four years?" he was asked.

"I certainly would," he said. "He is a very capable man, a very good man, and he seems to know what he is doing."

Praises His Orchestra.

Ford's enthusiasm was manifest again when he swung from the more serious question of the Presidency to his pet hobby, the revival of old-fashioned dances and of old-time melodies. He is very proud of his orchestra composed, he said, of the violin, the sousaphone, the cymbalum and the dulcimer.

Ford plainly indicated his distaste for jazz, although he declared he frequently goes to dances with Mrs. Ford and they dance the gallop and other old-fashioned dances to modern music.

"In Detroit and surrounding towns," he said, "there are thousands of schoolchildren dancing old-fashioned dances to old-fashioned airs. Jazz has no melody."

Ford turned to consideration of the "flapper problem." He placed responsibility for the sophistication of the daughters of today squarely upon the shoulders of the parents.

Women of Today Better.

"The flapper of today is all right," he said. "The trouble is with her parents. The old folks of today, and by that I mean the parents, too, are out of step with the times. Many of them have not bothered to keep up the modern pace and their children have gone ahead. The girl of today is sophisticated and knows how to take care of herself. Nobody is going to pull the wool over her eyes. She has a distinct advantage over the children of other years.

"The mothers of today are just as good if not a little bit better than the mothers of yesterday. Women in general are doing more than their share in the world's progress."

Business conditions, according to Mr. Ford, are at a lull at the present time, but he expects business to "pick up." He predicted that 1927 will be a prosperous year.

"I found things very well in Washington," he said. "They have a good bunch of men down there."

No Public Observance.

West Orange, N. J., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Thomas A. Edison will be 80 years old tomorrow. The day, hailed by the rest of the world as one which will bring into the realm of the octogenarians a man who has made possible industries whose capital amounts to $15,000,000,000, apparently meant nothing here tonight.

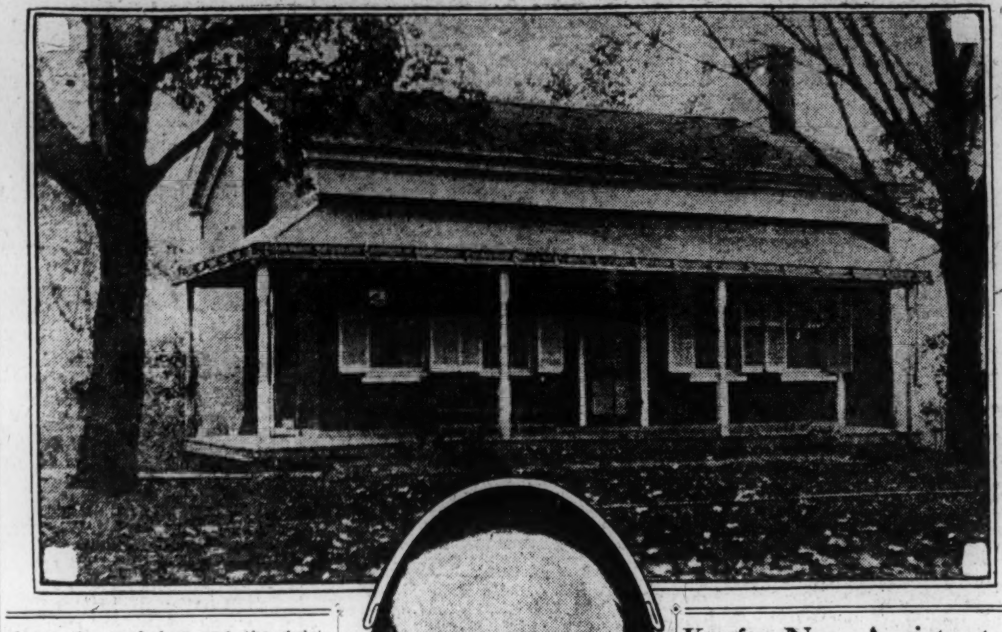
At the factory and laboratories the usual routine continued. At the offices the presence of several newspaper photographers seeking pictures of the inventor was the only outward sign of an event forthcoming.

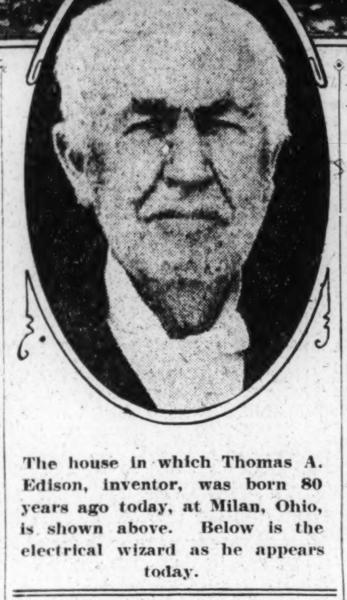
No public celebration was planned by West Orange. A quiet reception will take place at the Edison home in Llewellyn Park, at which Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer, are expected. Mr. Edison may drop in at the dinner in Newark of the Edison Pioneers, a group of men associated with him for many years.

Mrs. Edison today characterized her distinguished husband as "a tease."

"If there is any point about which you are sensitive," she laughed, "he dwells on it. He's a great tease; he will tell you what you don't like to hear. Mr. Edison likes to have people about him; he never wants to be left alone. But he doesn't want to be bothered. Nor does he enter into what is going on around him. He reads the newspapers religiously and magazines by the score. Once in a great while he will pick up a detective story and read it in one sitting. Never a novel. He doesn't like games, such as cards."

WHERE EDISON WAS BORN, 80 YEARS AGO TODAY





The house in which Thomas A. Edison, inventor, was born 80 years ago today, at Milan, Ohio, is shown above. Below is the electrical wizard as he appears today.

$50,000 IN CURRENCY DISAPPEARS AT SEA

Money in Liner's Strong Box Taken Between Panama and California.

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 10 (By A. P.). Disappearance of a $50,000 currency shipment was reported when the Panama mail steamship Columbia reached port today.

The money, consigned by a Central American bank to a Los Angeles financial house, had been removed from the strong box of the liner during her voyage north from the Panama canal, police said officers of the ship stated. More than 100 passengers and the ship's crew were held on board until police could determine a course to be followed.

The shipment was not missed until yesterday. Capt. Robert E. Judson, in command of the liner, at once began an investigation, but no clews were found. Since leaving Central America the Columbia had not touched port.

The box had been locked in the storeroom which has an iron door. According to Capt. Judson, this door was found locked at the time the money was discovered missing.

FALSE TEETH CLEW IN NEW MURDER CASE

Webster County Officials Are Investigating Three Homicide Mysteries.

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 10.—Delivery to the Webster county sheriff's office of a set of false teeth found near the abandoned coal mine at Webster Springs, where the skeleton of George "Holligan" Bennett was found last year after a five-year search, has caused Webster authorities to begin investigation of the third mystery murder case in which the body of the victim is or was missing. The teeth, found by Sherman Gregory, are believed to be those of Andrew Mills, last seen alive July 3, 1921, at Webster Springs.

Meanwhile deputies from Sheriff A. L. Gregory's office are searching an acre of sawdust on the Back fork of Holly river for the body of the Rev. Blaine Stout, of Gilmer county, believed to have been hidden there by moonshiners who killed him in the belief he was a Federal officer disguised as a minister.

Another mystery is that of the death of Thornton Hamerick, found dying near his home in Webster Springs three years ago, from a wound in his back. He said somebody had attacked him from the rear, but it was believed that he had fallen. Information given at the trial of those recently convicted for the Bennett murder is believed to connect a prisoner now held on charge of being implicated in that case, with the murder of Hamerick.

He is a native of Pennsylvania, born in 1865, and entered the army as an assistant surgeon in June, 1890, reaching the grade of colonel in 1916. He served in the Spanish and Philippine wars and was a professor of military hygiene at West Point. He was made an officer of the Legion of Honor by France.

Boulder Dam Project Explained by Arentz

Representative Samuel S. Arentz, of Nevada, spoke on Western water problems before the American Association of Engineers last night in the Playhouse, 1814 N street northwest, in which he outlined the proposed Boulder Canyon dam project on the Colorado river.

The dam is necessary to prevent floods, to procure an adequate supply of water for home and irrigation purposes, and to procure power, he stated, adding that such a project should be developed by the government rather than private interests. At some future date a treaty for the allocation of water for lands beyond the border will be necessary and government control of the stream would be beneficial in such a contingency, he said.

BEACONS ONLY GUIDES FOR PLANE CARRYING 8

Epochal Flight Made From Detroit to Toledo With New Device.

Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Relying on radio beacons to keeps its course, a Stout-Ford three-motored airplane which arrived here today from Detroit on an experimental flight, tonight was en route home.

The flight marked the first use in commercial aviation of the radio beacon, a newly perfected device by which pilots are guided by a series of radio dots and dashes. The flier is freed from dependence on landmarks for direction, the slightest deviation from his course altering the signals he receives.

Army planes have used the radio beacons heretofore, but the trial today was declared to be the first time in which any flight has been made between separate fields at both of which beacons were working in coordination.

W. B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Airplane Co., who made the trip in company with W. B. Stout, designer and builder of the ship, and six other passengers, declared the flight a complete success, opening up a new channel for commercial aviation.

"We had scarcely left the ground at the Detroit airport when we began receiving signals from our own station," he said. "Long before we were out of range of our own station we received a welcoming message from McCook field at Dayton. We were guided by the dots and dashes, but we also received voice messages from McCook field telling us of visability, landing conditions and everything pertinent to the trip."

The radio beacon sends by the means of two instruments, signals in any desired direction. When the sending station is notified of the direction of the impending flight, a dial is set toward that pont of the compass and the sending instruments started.

The radio beacon sends the signals only in the desired direction. The plane pilot, when on the right course, receives the Morse signal T-a dash. If he veers to the right he receives the Morse signal A-dot dash. If he turns to the left off his course he receives the Morse signal N-dash dot.

McCook field engineers who developed the radio beacon now are perfecting a system by which lights on the control board of the plane will give the desired signals so that the pilot need not be acquainted with the telegraph code.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The Stout-Ford three-motored airplane, which made a test flight today to Dayton, Ohio, with radio beacons guiding its course, returned tonight to the Ford airport here. The crew reported no trouble on the return trip.

DIAZ CAVALRY PURSUING LIBERALS TO HONDURAS

Recaptured Nicaraguan City, Caring for 400 Wounded, Lacks Food and Water.

Managua, Nicaragua, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Gen. Viquez, commander of the conservative troops at Chinandega, reports that cavalry is pursuing the liberals and has captured five machine guns. The liberals are fleeing toward the Honduras frontier.

Conditions at Chinandega are very bad, there being little food or water, and there is much suffering from hunger and thirst. Dr. Daniel Molloy, of the Rockefeller Foundation, with other doctors of the Red Cross, are proceeding to Chinandega on a special train. They fear an outbreak of typhoid or other disease, as the city was cut off from its water supply before the liberals attacked it.

The death list on both sides is increasing. At least 400 wounded are being cared for, and there are many wounded receiving no attention, although some have been taken to Corinto and may be receiving aid there. Wounded are arriving constantly at Managua.

Twelve blocks of the city of Chinandega were burned and many of the stores, warehouses and residences were looted. Women and children were killed by machine-gun fire in trying to save their household furniture, while other noncombatants perished as they tried to go through the streets with some of their belongings, for machine guns were in constant action and spared none.

President Diaz declares the Chinandega disaster is the worst in the history of Nicragua, and that he is willing to do anything to stop the slaughter.

Liberal forces under Gen. Moncada are reported to be nearing Matagalpa, 75 miles northeast of Managua. Conservative troops are being rushed to that city to prevent its capture by the liberals.

Matagalpa is almost midway between the conservative capital, Managua, and Puerto Cabezas, headquarters of the liberal government under President Sacasa.

LAND ARMAMENTS SEEN AS VITAL ISSUE BY GENEVA CHIEFS

League of Nations Experts Fear Powers Will Insist on General Parley.

POPE VIEWS AMERICAN OFFER STEP FORWARD

Vatican Regards Washington as Maintaining Leadership for World Peace.

Geneva, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Reaction at Geneva to President Coolidge's recommendation for a supplementary five-power naval accord was twofold. The League of Nations was happy to see anything done to further the cause of disarmament, but this was coupled with doubt as to whether France and Italy, and even Great Britain, will see their way clear to negotiating a naval agreement limiting cruisers, destroyers and submarines, unless the accord was linked up with an agreement on military and aviation problems.

Experts are of the opinion that if France and Italy in the long run accept participation in a five-power conference they will be almost certain to make the reservation that the treaty must not enter into force until a satisfactory pact is achieved relative to military and air matters.

On the other hand, it is admitted that a general international conference bearing on all the aspects of armaments, with Russia refusing to participate, would stand little chance of attaining important results, especially European and continental army reductions, and that there is something to be said in favor of the American idea of handling disarmament in concrete stages among the powers interested in particular armaments.

It is also remarked, however, that if France and Italy accepted a separate naval parley they would risk losing American and British support for a later conference on military and air problems.

Pope Voices Approval.

Rome, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The Pope, informed this evening of the proposal of President Coolidge on disarmament, expressed great pleasure at learning of a further step intended to lead to the maintenance of world peace. The pontiff, however, refrained from making a definite statement until he could study the text of the document carefully.

Vatican circles were also greatly pleased, and considered President Coolidge's move a most important one in completing the work of the Washington disarmament conference, having as its definite aim, if not abolition of war, at least rendering war less likely.

It is pointed out that the Coolidge proposal, whatever its fate, confirms the universally recognized view that America has shown magnificent world leadership in favor of peace.

TEXT OF COOLIDGE'S ARMS CUT PLAN

Conference at Geneva On Cruiser Limit Sought

Extension of Principle of Restriction Fixed in Treaties Reached at Washington to Minor Craft Urged on Four Big Powers.

The text of President Coolidge's message on a further reduction in naval armaments follows:

Pursuant to my instructions the American Ambassadors at London, Paris, Rome and Tokyo will today present to the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan a memorandum suggesting that they empower their delegates at the forthcoming meeting of the preparatory commission for the disarmament conference at Geneva to negotiate and conclude at an early date an agreement further limiting naval armament, supplementing the Washington treaty on that subject, and covering the classes of vessels not covered by that treaty. I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, a copy of this memorandum.

I wish to inform the Congress of the considerations which have moved me to take this action.

The support of all measures looking to the preservation of the peace of the world has been long established as a fundamental policy of this government. The American government and people are convinced that competitive armaments constitute one of the most dangerous contributing causes of international suspicion and discord and are calculated eventually to lead to war. A recognition of this fact and a desire as far as possible to remove this danger led the American government in 1921 to call the Washington conference.

At that time we were engaged in a great building program which, upon its completion, would have given us first place on the sea. We felt then, however, and feel now, that the policy we then advocated—that of deliberate self-denial and limitation of naval armament by the great naval powers—promised the attainment of at least one guarantee of peace, an end worthy of mutual adjustment and concession.

Cites Washington Conference.

At the Washington conference we found the other nations animated with the same desire as ourselves to remove naval competition from the list of possible causes of international discord. Unfortunately, however, it was not possible to reach agreements at Washington covering all classes of naval ships. The Washington treaty provided a specific tonnage limitation upon capital ships and aircraft carriers, with certain restrictions as to size and maximum caliber of guns for other vessels. Every nation has been at complete liberty to build any number of cruisers, destroyers and submarines. Only size and armament of cruisers were limited. The signatories of the Washington treaty have fulfilled their obligations faithfully and there can be no doubt that the treaty constitutes an outstanding success in its operation.

It has been the hope of the American government, constantly expressed by the Congress since the Washington conference, that a favorable opportunity might present itself to complete the work begun here by the conclusion of further agreements covering cruisers, destroyers and submarines. The desirability of such an agreement has been apparent, since it was only to be expected that the spirit of competition, stifled as regards capital ships and aircraft carriers by the Washington treaty, would, sooner or later, show itself with regard to the other vessels not limited under the treaty. Actually, I do not believe that competitive building of these classes of ships has begun. Nevertheless, far-reaching building programs have been laid down by certain powers, and there has appeared in our own country, as well as abroad, a sentiment urging naval construction on the ground that such construction is taking place elsewhere. In such sentiments lies the germ of renewed naval competition.

Finds Time Opportune.

I am sure that all governments and all peoples would choose a system of naval limitation in preference to consciously reverting to competitive building. Therefore, in the hope of bringing about an opportunity for discussion among the principal naval powers to ascertain whether further limitation is practicable, I have suggested to them that negotiations on this subject should begin as soon as possible.

The moment seems particularly opportune to try to secure further limitation of armament in accordance with the expressed will of the Congress. The earnest desire of the nations of the world to relieve themselves in as great a measure as possible of the burden of armaments and to avoid the dangers of competition has been shown by the establishment of the preparatory commission for the disarmament conference, which met in Geneva last May, and which is continuing its work with a view to preparing the agenda for a final general conference. For more than six months, representatives of a score or more of nations have examined from all points of view the problem of the reduction and limitation of armaments. In these discussions it was brought out very clearly that a number of nations felt that land, sea and air armaments were interdependent and that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to agree upon the limitation of one type of armament without simultaneously limiting the other types.

The consequence to be feared is that a deadlock will be reached, should even partial progress in the reduction of armaments be conditioned upon the acceptance of some universal plan covering land, sea and air forces together. If the prospective deadlock can not be broken, it is probable that little progress will be made for the time being. It appears to me to be the duty of this government, which has always advocated limitation of armaments, to endeavor to suggest some avenue by which concrete results may be achieved even though such results may be short of an ultimate ideal solution for the three-fold problem of land, sea and air armament.

Regional Agreements Proposed.

Our delegates at Geneva have consistently expressed the view that under conditions as they exist in the world today the problems of land and air armaments are most susceptible of solution by regional agreements covering regions within which the land or air armaments of one country could constitute a potential threat to another country. Geographical continents have been suggested as regions appropriate for land and air limitation agreements.

The American land and air forces constitute a threat to no one. They are at minimum strength; their reduction has been suggested by no one as a necessary condition precedent to general arms limitation. This reduction of our land forces has been rendered possible by our favored geographical position. I realize that the problems of armaments on land and in the air in Europe are beset with difficulties which in all justice we must recognize and, although this government will always be ready to lend its assistance in any appropriate way to efforts on the part of European or other governments to arrive at regional agreements limiting land and air forces, it would hesitate to make specific proposals on this subject to European nations.

The problem of the limitation of naval armament, while not regional in character or susceptible of regional treatment, has been successfully treated, in part, by an agreement among the five leading naval powers, and, in my opinion, can be definitely dealt with by further agreements among those powers.

It will be a contribution to the success of the preliminary work now going on at Geneva should the great naval powers there agree upon a further definite limitation of naval armament.

It is my intention that the American representatives at Geneva should continue to discuss with the representatives of the other nations there the program for a general limitation of armaments conference. If such a conference should be possible in the future on a basis generally acceptable, this government would, of course, be highly gratified. Pending the formulation of the plan for such a general conference, however, I believe that we should make an immediate and sincere effort to solve the problem of naval limitation, the solution of which would do much to make the efforts toward more general limitation successful.

Text of Coolidge Memorandum.

The memorandum accompanying the President's message follows:

The American government has followed with close attention the proceedings of the preparatory commission for the disarmament conference, and, after the most careful deliberation, has concluded that it can helpfully make certain observations at this time which, it hopes, may contribute materially to the success of that commission—a success earnestly desired by the government and people of the United States.

The conviction that the competitive augmentation of national armaments has been one of the principal causes of international suspicion and ill will, leading to war, is firmly held by the American government and people. Hence the American government has neglected no opportunity to lend its sympathy and support to international efforts to reduce and limit armaments.

The success of the Washington conference of 1921-22 demonstrated that other powers were animated with a similar desire to do away with this dangerous source of international discord. The Washington conference made a beginning, however, and it has been the continued hope of the American government, since 1922, that the task undertaken at Washington by the group of naval powers could be resumed and completed.

For this reason, the American government was happy to observe that the efforts looking toward the holding of a general international conference for the limitation of armament, which had been in progress for several years under the auspices of the League of Nations, had reached, in December, 1925, a stage sufficiently advanced, in the opinion of the Council of the League of Nations, to warrant the establishment of the preparatory commission, to meet in 1926, to prepare the ground for an international conference at an early date. The American government, pursuant to its policy of cooperation with all efforts calculated to bring about an actual limitation of armament, accepted the invitation of the council to be represented on the preparatory commission. The American representatives on that commission have endeavored to play a helpful part in its discussions, and they will continue to be guided by that policy.

Warns of Difficulties.

The American government believes that the discussions of the commission have been most valuable in making clear the views of the various governments as to the problems presented, and in demonstrating the complexity and diversity of the obstacles to be overcome in the preparation and conclusion of a general agreement for the limitation of all armament.

At the same time, these very complexities and difficulties, as brought out in the preparatory commission, have clearly pointed out that a final solution for the problem of armament may not be immediately practicable. Indeed, at the latest meeting of the Council of the League of Nations several distinguished statesmen, leaders in the movement for the limitation of armament, sounded a note of warning against too great optimism of immediate success.

The American government is most anxious that concrete results in the limitation of armament may be achieved. The discussion of the preparatory commission have emphasized the fact that a number of governments consider that one of the chief present obstacles to the general reduction and limitation of armaments lies in the interdependence of land, sea, and air armaments, and in the consequent impossibility of reducing or limiting one of these categories without dealing simultaneously with the others. On the other hand, the discussions have demonstrated even more emphatically that, should all effort to bring about the reduction or limitation of armament be conditioned upon the acceptance by all the world of a comprehensive plan covering all classes and types of armament, there would be little, if any, prospect of actual progress toward arms limitation in the near future.

Universal Limitation Halted.

The above difficulties must be frankly recognized. The American government believes that they can be overcome and that they must be overcome, since the consequences of a failure to ovrcome them, and to make some definite, if only partial, agreement for the limitation of armament, would constitute a setback to the cause of international peace too great to deserve serious contemplation as a possibility.

Admitting reluctantly that the existing political situations in certain parts of the world may render the problem of universal limitation incapable of immediate solution as a whole, the American government believes that it is entirely practicable for the nations of the world to proceed at once to the isolation and separate solution of such problems as may appear susceptible of such treatment, meanwhile continuing to give sympathetic consideration and discussion to comprehensive proposals aimed at the simultaneous limitation of land, sea, and air armaments by a general agreement when such an agreement may be warranted by existing world conditions. The American government believes that the adoption of such a course is the duty of the governments represented on the preparatory commission, and that by so doing they will insure the achievement by the commission and by the general conference of concrete, even though perhaps only partial, results, thus facilitating progress toward the final solution of the general problem.

The American government, as its representatives on the preparatory commission have repeatedly stated, feels that land and air armaments constitute essentially regional problems to be solved primarily by regional agreements. The American army and air force are at minimum strength. Agreement for land and air limitation in other regions of the world would not be dependent upon the reduction or limitation of American land and air forces. Therefore the American government does not feel that it can appropriately offer definite suggestions to other powers in regard to the limitation of these categories of armament.

Cites Naval Problems.

The problem of the limitation of naval armament, while not regional in character, can be dealt with as a practical matter by measures affecting the navies of a limited group of powers. This has been clearly established by the success of the Washington treaty limiting naval armament. The United States, as the initiator of the Washington conference and as one of the principal naval powers, has a direct interest in this question, and, being both ready and willing to enter into an agreement further limiting naval armament, feels itself privileged to indicate a course of procedure which will, in its opinion, lead to such an agreement.

The discussions over a period of six months in Geneva have been most useful in the opportunity afforded for an exchange of views as to the general problem of naval limitation, and on the basis of these discussions it is felt that there is a possibility of reconciling many of the divergent views which have been expressed in such a manner as to meet the requirements of the naval powers and enable them to decide upon acceptable measures of limitation.

In order to advance definitely toward a limitation agreement, the government of the United States takes this method of addressing an inquiry to the governments signatories of the Washington treaty limiting naval armament as to whether they are disposed to empower their representatives at the forthcoming meeting of the preparatory commission to initiate negotiations looking toward an agreement providing for limitation in the classes of naval vessels not covered by the Washington treaty.

Limits of Powers Seen.

The American government is not unmindful of the fact that the preparatory commission is not specifically charged with the duty of concluding international agreements, and that its task is primarily that of preparing the agenda for a conference to be called at a later date. Nevertheless, being sincerely desirous of the success of the preparatory commission, the American government makes this suggestion in the firm belief that the conclusion at Geneva, as soon as possible, among the powers signatories of the Washington treaty, of an agreement for further naval limitation, far from interfering with or detracting from the success of the preparatory commission's aims, would constitute a valuable contribution to the sum of achievement attributable to that commission and would facilitate the task of the final conference in dealing with the particularly complex problems of land and air armament, perhaps capable of solution for the present only by regional limitation agreements.

It seems probable that under any circumstances the final conference will not be able to meet during this calendar year. The coming into effect of agreements reached by it might be delayed for a considerable period for a multitude of causes. Therefore the American government believes that those powers which may be able to arrive at an agreement for further naval limitation at an earlier date would not be justified in consciously postponing that agreement and thereby opening the way for a recrudescence of a spirit of competitive naval building—a development greatly to be deplored by all governments and peoples.

Washington Treaty Basis.

The American government feels that the general principles of the Washington treaty offer a suitable basis for further discussion among its signatories.

Although hesitating at this time to put forward rigid proposals as regards the ratios of naval strength to be maintained by the different powers, the American government, for its part, is disposed to accept, in regard to those classes of vessels not covered by the Washington treaty, an extension of the 5-5-3 ratio as regards the United States, Great Britain and Japan, and to leave to discussion at Geneva the ratios of France and Italy, taking into full account their special conditions and requirements in regard to the types of vessels in question. Ratios for capital ships and aircraft carriers were established by that treaty which would not be affected in any way by an agreement covering other classes of ships.

The American representatives at the forthcoming meeting at Geneva will, of course, participate fully in the discussions looking to the preparation of an agenda for a final general conference for the limitation of armament. In addition, they will have full powers to negotiate definitely regarding measures for further naval limitation, and, if they are able to reach agreement with the representatives of the other signatories of the Washington treaty, to conclude a convention embodying such agreement, in tentative or final form, as may be found practicable.

The American government earnestly hopes that the institution of such negotiations at Geneva may be agreeable to the governments of the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, and that comprehensive limitation of all types of naval armament may be brought into effect among the principal naval powers without delay.

COMMITTEE TO DRAFT TAX BILL IN AUTUMN

Ways and Means Plan Is to Have Measure Ready by December.

(By the Associated Press.)

By unanimous agreement the House ways and means committee decided yesterday to begin drafting a new tax reduction bill during the recess of Congress. Chairman Green was instructed to offer an amendment to the second deficiency bill when it comes before the House to provide funds for the committee to hold hearings.

Actual work on the measure probably will start early in October, and it is the committee's plan to have the bill ready to present to the House when Congress convenes in December.

It was decided to ask authority for a subcommittee, headed by Representative Bacharach (Republican), New Jersey, to conduct an inquiry into the administration of the customs service during the summer months.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE SUGGESTS NEW DISARMAMENT PARLEY

better prospect for acceptanc of the invitation to hold a conference than there is for the accomplishment of any practical result if the conference is held.

Proposal Faces Obstacles.

There are three outstanding obstacles to the success of a conference, along the line suggested, it is pointed out.

Firstly, France flatly refused to agree to limit auxiliary craft and submarines at the Washington conference and there is no indication of a change in French policy unless it be a stiffening of French opposition.

Secondly, the Coolidge plan to restrict the Geneva discussions to phases of naval disarmament is the plan which Hugh Gibson and his American assistants have been fruitlessly trying to have the Geneva preparatory commission adopt since last summer. In fact, the deadlock at Geneva resulted from the insistence of certain powers that disarmament be discussed in its broad sense, with military resources of all nations considered in connection with naval matters. Thus President Coolidge is now asking the naval powers to do something which heretofore they have stubbornly declined to do.

Third, the United States is admittedly in a far weaker position to enter into a disarmament conference than was the case in 1921, because America has been lagging behind in naval strength while the other designated powers have been going ahead and the result is that America has nothing to sacrifice or trade with.

As one senator expressed it at the White House yesterday, the United States would be simply saying to the powers: "We haven't any of the ships we propose to scrap so we would like you to scrap some."

Washington Parley Recalled.

At the Washington conference, it is pointed out, the United States was completing its program of 1916, calling for ten new battleships and six battle cruisers. More than $330,000,000 already had been spent on these ships. America was forging ahead to a position where in a few years it would have had the most powerful navy in the world. America had apparently inexhaustible funds to devote to the program of building the greatest navy and the Congress was committed to the 1916 building program.

Thus the powers had much to gain from the standpoint of adjusting their own naval strength to the American standard, and when Charles Evans Hughes, who headed the American delegation, made his offer of sacrifice it was heeded.

When Hughes proposed "to scrap all capital ships under construction" and announced that this included six battle cruisers and seven battleships on the ways and two battleships launched, the representatives of the powers took notice. And when he added further willingness to sacrifice and offered to scrap 845,740 tons of American naval strength, all but 227,740 tons of which was made up of newest first-line capital ships, the powers took up the question of how much they were willing to pay for this American sacrifice.

France Held to Light Craft.

But as the conference developed, it was demonstrated that even this American offer did not tempt France to accept the conference suggestion that cruisers and submarines be made subject to limitation. France said her national defense would not permit reductions in light cruisers and submarines and she stuck by her guns despite presure of public opinion which sought to move her delegation. When it was suggested that a 5-5-3 ratio be applied to smaller craft, the French government took the position that France's lack of strength in capital ships made it all the more necessary for her to be free to increase her strength in smaller craft used for her own protection.

The Washington conference therefore failed to provide limitation for vessels of the cruiser type or for submarines and obtained only reductions for the number of capital ships, a capital ship being a vessel of war, not an aircraft carrier, with displacement exceeding 10,000 tons or with guns of more than 8-inch caliber. The proposed conference now would endeavor to apply limitations to these smaller craft.

Borah Makes Comment.

The message was not read until late in the House but was read early in the Senate. Comment from leaders was as follows:

Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, said:

"I am thoroughly in sympathy with the purpose which the President apparently has in view. I hope he has more reason to expect its success than is apparent to me just now."

Senator Hiram Johnson, who ranks next to Senator Borah on the foreign relations committee, said:

"The message seems to indicate that all our cruisers in the future will be constructed exclusively of authorizations. In the event of any serious emergency the announcement that three American authorizations had sailed out of Hampton Roads would doubtless cause foreign powers to tremble and fall on their knees."

Senator Hale, chairman of the naval affairs committee, said:

"I have always been in favor of extending the provisions of the Washington treaty to other types of ships and carriers. The President's proposal is in line with this policy and has nothing to do with the present building program of the navy, which, if carried out, would not raise our strength to any limitation level which by any possibility could be adopted by such a conference.

"On the contrary, the building of new cruisers now contemplated would improve the position of the United States at such a conference."

Wadsworth Cites Sacrifice.

Senator Wadsworth, chairman of the miliatry affairs committee, said:

"I shall be very much interested to see how the powers will greet this suggestion. It will be a test of their unselfishness. We made a sacrifice in 1922 and we shall see if they are willing to make one now."

Senator Moses said:

"There are people who will interpret this message as an attempt to defeat the three cruiser program. I do not so interpret it. I regard it as a great state paper. However, a time when our foreign affairs are being conducted in Central America and China almost entirely by war vessels and marines may seem to some an inopportune time to talk naval disarmament."

Senator Reed, of Missouri, said:

"It is intended as a stop to fill the gap left at the Washington conference, but I don't think it will get anywhere.

"I have not the slightest idea that France will consent to a limitation of submarines or Great Britain to a limitation of cruisers. The message is also aimed at the three cruiser program now being discussed in Congress. My idea would be for us to go ahead and build more cruisers."

Stronger Navy Sought.

Senator Gerry, who ranks next to Senator Swanson on the Democratic membership of the naval affairs committee, said:

"It is the duty of the United States to maintain its position and not to be second to any other power. If we do this I believe we are much more likely to be successful in obtaining satisfactory agreements in the future."

Senator Dill, Democratic member of the naval affairs committee, said:

"I thoroughly approve of the President's desire to enter into agreements to limit naval armament. This engenders a peace spirit, in my opinion, and also will save the taxpayers money if the plan can be consummated."

Press Views of Proposal For New Naval Conference

NEW YORK.

Herald Tribune—If other naval powers are not willing to extend the 5-5-3 ratio and prefer to go ahead constructing auxiliary ships, there will be nothing left for us to do but to take up the challenge. Our people want a treaty ratio navy and intend to have one. We are so far behind now in cruisers that we would probably have to authorize and build many more, even after the ratio were extended.

Times—It is a fine gesture, and the President must be heartily commended for pursuing a project which he has so often shown to be near his heart. This at once suggests a difficulty which our negotiators at Geneva would encounter. In the matter of cruisers our navy has nothing to offer. It can not propose such a sacrifice as it made at the Washington conference in the item of battleships. Indeed, one result of the agreement which the President suggests would be, if the ratio of 5-5-3 were applied all along the line, that the United States might be entitled to build more cruisers while Great Britain and Japan would have to abandon a part of their cruiser program. Another difficulty which our representatives at Geneva would be sure to encounter lies in the doubt whether the Senate would ratify any such naval treaty as the President indicates.

World—The United States does not have in this new field the bargaining strength we had in 1921. We can not bring forward so effectively the trump argument that if a limitation is not imposed we shall outbuild all rivals. But we have a case to state, and prestige with which to back it. Mr. Coolidge's memorandum should mark the beginning of another effort to scrap more of the murderous machinery that the world has long piled up.

PITTSBURGH

Post—It is but common sense that the only way to limit armament is to do so by international agreement, but whether President Coolidge can do any more toward bringing this about than the Geneva conference remains to be seen. Meanwhile another common sense proposition is that if the United States is to hold aloof from such international bodies for peace as the League of Nations and the world court, it will have to give greater attention to its military defenses. If it has no confidence in international associations for peace it will have to arm accordingly.

The "Big Navy" men of Congress, under the circumstances, have an argument not lightly to be set aside.

PORTLAND

Oregonian—The President, who must achieve concrete results, must remove, surmount or circumvent the obstacles over which the senatorial imagination soars.

He is making progress which will be recorded in history, to be read long after the senators' words have become dusty in the vaults of the Capitol.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Chronicle—President Coolidge need have no surprise if the popular reaction to his new call for naval disarmament will be an insistence that our government "Trust in God and keep our powder dry."

In other words, there will be no abatement of the public demand that Congress make the appropriations for the new cruisers, and that the construction of the ships proceed until such a time as the signature of the other powers is attached to the new treaty.

The United States has already shown its readiness to meet the other powers half-way. We have no means of knowing how they will view it, now that they are called on to do the bulk of the scrapping. And until we do know, and know that the 5-5-3 ratio is to be established in fact as well as in theory, the American people, we are sure, fell that it is up to our government to proceed to build the ships we need to put us where we belong.

BOSTON.

Herald—The President's message to Congress on the subject of further limiting naval armaments points the way for this country and for all the world to step forward toward the goal of permanent peace. He does not expect to work a miracle. He does expect to gain ground. The purpose now is to go ahead from the base established at the Washington conference. Rushing along with a vision of a splendid future goes the horror of a war method and means more devastating and horrible than the past has ever known. It is this situation that the President calls for one step toward the goal of peace.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Republican—The President has made a move which for many years may prove of major importance in the development of peaceful international relations throughout the world. To override him for the purpose of appropriating a paltry $1,200,000 toward a nominal yet provocative beginning of three cruisers which will actually cost $35,000,000 when finished, would be a piece of monumental folly. It would tend to advertise to the other powers that the President lacks the confidence and support of Congress at the very time when he needs a demonstration of support in order to accomplish a great end.

KANSAS CITY

Star—President Coolidge at least has made a gesture of good will in inviting other naval powers to join the United States in another conference on the reduction of naval armaments. Whether any important results flow from his invitation or not, it demonstrates once more, the sincere purpose of the United States to take the leadership for peaceful settlement of disputes.

PHILADELPHIA.

Public Ledger—It may be definitely stated that American public opinion will overwhelmingly indorse the present move. We know that we can outbuild any other nation if circumstances require it. But the American people also sense the evils and dangers which lie in any such policy. President Coolidge has set out to combat them. The other nations can scarcely afford to reject his proposals.

CINCINNATI.

Commercial Tribune—President Coolidge is pressing his desire that there be a new agreement among world powers for an extension of the armament reduction program.

The President thus emphasizes his outspoken opposition to any action that even remotely can suggest a renewal of competitive naval construction. He is personally expressing his policy of curtailment rather than construction and his perfect confidence in the wisdom of his conviction as a measure for peace in offset of any movement that may be mistakenly conceived as suggestive of war.

M'NARY BILL GETS FIRST TEST TODAY ON VOTE IN SENATE

Supporters Hold Conferences to Agree on Program to Insure Passage.

ACTION BY COOLIDGE IS MUCH DISCUSSED

Wadsworth Says Measure Would Create the Nation's Greatest Bureaucracy.

(By the Associated Press.)

Rapidly approaching the final test of its strength, the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill was debated in both the House and Senate yesterday with interest manifest as to what President Coolidge would do if it is passed.

For a while it appeared the bill had gained strength in the Senate, where a vote will be taken today, Chairman McNary, of the agriculture committee, announcing that an agreement had been reached with Southern senators to vote for the measure with the equalization fee on cotton deferred two years, and the Bledsoe insurance plan in effect meanwhile.

Later, however, this program seemed to be upset as a result of a conference in the office of Vice President Dawes, who has advocated application of the equalization fee on all commodities alike. A number of Western and Southern senators attended, and a difference of opinion developed as to whether the fee on cotton should be deferred.

Informal Conferences Had.

Informal conferences were continuing between senators last night in an effort to agree on a program that would give the bill enough support to insure its passage.

In the House, advocates of the bill freely predicted passage, while its opponents speculated on the attitude of President Coolidge.

Representative Tincher (Republican), Kansas, who led the administration's fight in the House on the McNary-Haugen bill last year, declared the measure was a vehicle to put Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, in the White House, and Representative Aswell, of Louisiana, ranking Democrat on the agriculture committee, predicted Mr. Coolidge would sign the bill, and then, to test its constitutionality, would throw it into the Supreme Court to remain there until after the 1928 elections.

Haugen Speaks on Bill.

The only House member to speak at length in favor of the bill was Chairman Haugen of the agricultural committee, but in the Senate a half dozen members contended the measure would do for agriculture what the tariff has done for business and the Federal reserve law for banking.

Senator Watson (Republican), Indiana, contended the equalization fee was "fair and just" and would prevent overproduction, and Senator Nye, (Republican), North Dakota, held that charges that the bill was revolutionary were not justified because it was designed to meet revolutionary conditions.

Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota, in a speech read by the clerk, said that while the measure might fail to give the farmers all the assistance they were entitled to, it should be tried as a solution of one of the nation's most pressing problems.

Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, also urged passage of the bill, and denied that the farm board which it would create would be appointed by farm lobbyists and encroach upon the prerogatives of the executive branch of the government.

Speaking in opposition to the bill Senator Moses (Republican), New Hampshire, charged it was being "log rolled through here by methods unworthy of the Senate," while Senator McLean (Republican), Connecticut, assailed it as class legislation and insisted it would fix prices.

Senator Wadsworth (Republican), New York, attacked the bill as taking from free men the right to conduct their own business in their own way and declared it would establish the "greatest bureaucracy in the history of the country."

French Staff Must Learn Stenography

Paris, Feb. 6 (By A. P.).—French general staff officers must be stenographers as well as military geniuses. A war department order just issued requires them to learn, as rapidly as possible, at least the rudiments of typewriting.

The necessity of being able to transcribe secret orders and documents, that can not be seen by even the most trustworthy secretaries, was given as the reason.

The daughter ran 400 yards to the Clagett home, a living torch, to summon aid.

Wales Sees His Record Saved by Radio Phone

London, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The Prince of Wales tonight welcomed the triumph of science in perfecting transatlantic telephony as having removed some grave fears from his mind. He was speaking as the guest of the Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Alluding to his year in office as president of the British Association for the advancement of science, he reminded his hearers that on the occasion of his presidential address, Lord Balfour on his behalf had expressed the aspiration that his year in office would be marked by some striking scientific achievement.

"Months passed," said the prince, "and I had begun almost to despair that this year in office would be a failure. Then suddenly came the news that anybody could—at a price—call up anybody in America whenever he chose. That triumph gives the hallmark to my term of office in the association."

Confirmed Amos W. W. Woodcock United States attorney for Maryland, and large number of postmasters.

Senator Jones, (Republican), of Washington, introduced bills for government ownership and operation of merchant marine, and for private ownership and operation under Federal subsidy. Addressing Senate, he said in view of apparent impossibility of adopting subsidy, he believed development of merchant marine was so important he was prepared to support government ownership.

Elections committee refused to make preliminary report in case of Senator-designate Frank L. Smith and will reopen hearings which virtually carries whole question over to end of session.

Secretary Mellon transmitted text of bill he urges under which money may be used from appropriations for enforcement of narcotics and prohibition laws to such extent as Secretary, with approval of President, may deem necessary to make advances to "under cover" agents.

Senator Frazier, (Republican), of North Dakota, introduced bill to reorganize administration of Federal intermediate credit bank system and create Federal intermediate credit bureau.

APPROVAL ON GIVING SMITH OATH REFUSED

Senate Committee Sets Wednesday as Start of Primary Fund Inquiry.

(By the Associated Press.)

Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, suffered another reverse yesterday in his campaign to obtain a seat in the Senate.

The Senate elections committee refused to grant his request that it make a preliminary report recommending that the oath of office be administered to him and later conduct the investigation ordered by the Senate into contributions made by public utilities operators to his senatorial primary campaign.

The committee set Wednesday for beginning this inquiry, subject, however, to the approval of the senator-designate, who is ill at his home in Dwight, Ill. If this date is unsatisfactory to him another will be fixed. The decision of the committee to go forward with the investigation and make a complete report to the Senate was accepted generally to mean that the case of Col. Smith as successor to the late Senator William B. McKinely would not be disposed of at this session, which has only three weeks to run.

ARLINGTON COUNTY MASON WINS HONOR IN STATE MEETING

Harry K. Green, of Clarendon, Elected Grand Junior Deacon at Richmond Conclave.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Harry K. Green, of Clarendon, past master of Columbia lodge, No. 285, A. F. and A. M., was elected grand junior deacon of the grand lodge of Masons of Virginia yesterday at the annual meeting and election of officers, held in Richmond, Va.

Mr. Green served as master of Columbia lodge during the year 1918, during which year the lodge held more meetings than any in its history, several hundred men stationed at Fort Myer receiving their degrees before leaving for the scenes of the war. In addition to having been master Green served during 1924 and 1925 as district deputy grand master.

Returning from Richmond last night Mr. Green, accompanied by W. L. Golden, master of the lodge; Hugh Reid, A. C. Cosdon, Benjamin Laycock, John M. Stewart, Dr. W. C. Whitehead, Homer Thomas and F. J. Hallock, were met by a large delegation from Columbia lodge at Alexandria.

James Randall Caton, of Alexandria, former president of the Kiwanis club, addressed the members of the Arlington county Monarch club at its meeting yesterday.

The need of an automobile for the school nurse coming to the attention of the club, President Perry L. Mitchell appointed a special committee, composed of Dr. E. R. Hagan, A. J. Porter and William J. Ingram, to investigate.

The proposal for a county manager form of government for Fairfax county, presented at the meeting of the Fairfax Chamber of Commerce held Wednesday night in the town hall by Miller Kielsgard, was indorsed by Thomas Keith and John W. Rust as a subject worthy of serious consideration by the chamber.

President E. C. Gibbs appointed a special committee, with Miller Kielsgard as chairman, to make a study of the question and to report at the March meeting. Other members of the committee are Thomas Keith, C. H. Powell and John W. Rust.

The Arlington County Colored Citizens' association will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the Odd Fellows' hall on Columbia pike. President Noble Thomas will preside. Among the questions to be discussed will be schools, roads and lights. Plans will also be formulated for the annual spring clean-up campaign.

President Thomas stated last night that the association will act on a resolution calling upon the board of supervisors to include in the budget for 1927 the purchase of a combination chemical and pumping engine for the fire department.

COMMENT IN LONDON FAVORS COOLIDGE PLAN

an early conference on the subject. Whatever opinion the government may have of the American proposal when it has been amply thought over, it was affirmed that France would welcome sympathetically any practical proposition consistent with her security.

Recognition in the memorandum of the special position which France holds so far as concerns other than capital ships has made a favorable impression, though there is some inclination to consider the proposal as aimed at submarines, a type of vessel regarded by France as absolutely essential for the security of her sea routes to her colonies.

Rome, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The Italian government tonight declined to make any official comment on President Coolidge's proposal for further naval disarmament which was submitted today to Premier Mussolini by Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher.

Italy's attitude, it was stated, would be set forth only after the proposal had been given most careful study by Mussolini, aided by experts on the disarmament question.

During Ambassador Fletcher's visit at the Chigi palace, Premier Mussolini carefully read President Coolidge's message to Congress and the text of the proposal concerning further naval disarmament, noting with a pencil various passages which struck him as important. Arising from his seat, the premier smilingly informed the ambassador that he would take great pleasure in studying the matter and in giving a carefully considered opinion in behalf of Italy at the earliest opportunity.

Although the government was reluctant to comment, it is the general belief in political circles that Italy will accept the proposal, but with reservations of a normal character leaving her representative freedom of action during any eventual negotiations at Washington or Geneva.

Rejection Is Forecast.

Another current of opinion, which, however, is not extensively held, inclines to the belief that Premier Mussolini will make clear in answering the proposal so definite a type of pessimism concerning the possibility of the success of the venture as virtually to constitute a rejection of President Coolidge's idea.

It is almost universally believed in political circles that Italy will face the proposal, whether she participates or not, with the same stand that she took at Washington and during the preliminary negotiations at Geneva, that a reduction in secondary ships which were not covered by the initial Washington pact would be impracticable under present conditions in Europe, particularly in view of the continued presence of political factors which make the safeguarding of continental nations an imperative necessity.

Italy, it was pointed out, has always been, and still is, sympathetic with the idea of general disarmament covering the sea, land and air. Because of conditions inherent in her problem of maintaining security from attack, however, it was said, she must go slowly concerning exclusively naval disarmament.

Her lengthy coast line, the necessity for the protection of her African colonies, her position in the Mediterranean as well as political consideration and her comparative poverty in secondary war materials such as iron, coal and industrial strength, it was stated, make Italy rely primarily on the possession of fast light cruisers, submarines and similar ships.

Tokio (Friday).—Ambassador Charles MacVeagh was handed copies of President Coolidge's message at 10 o'clock this morning at his residence. Although today is a public holiday, the newspapers are issuing extras. No reactions can yet be obtained, but it is known that the attitude of the Japanese naval officials will be one of strong opposition to accepting the capital ship ratio for submarines, at least.

generals. But, added the telegrams, their hindrance no longer would be tolerated.

Labor Move Is Defeated.

London, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The house of commons tonight rejected a labor amendment to the address from the throne, moved by Charles P. Trevelyan, challenging the government's policy in China. The vote was 320 to 113.

Sir Austen Chamberlain gave an important explanation of the government's policy, which included a concession that for the sake of advancing negotiations looking to a settlement of the difficulty, only an Indian brigade would be landed at Shanghai unless unforeseen dangers arose.

The sting was taken out of the labor attack by Sir Austen's announcement concerning the troops. Ramsay MacDonald, the opposition leader, sought to defend labor's attitude. He contended that the government policy of defense was bound to end in an offensive, but he recognized the importance of the foreign secretary's speech and hoped that its effect would be duly weighed at Hankow.

Prince of Wales Is Present.

The Prince of Wales was an interested listener in the peers' gallery.

Chief interest in Chamberlain's speech, however, was in the distinct announcement that provided Eugene Chen, the Cantonese foreign minister signed the agreement already reached at Hankow with the British charge d'affaires, Owen O'Malley, only the Indian troops now en route from Hongkong would be landed at Shanghai, while the main body of the Shanghai defense force would be held at Hongkong unless required by the emergence of fresh danger at Shanghai.

The minister announced that the government accepted Chen's assurances that he would not use force, or countenance the employment of force to bring about changes in the status of concessions for international settlement. He gave details of the new Hankow agreement, which provided that the new municipality would be elected by the rate payers, all funds raised would be spent in the municipality and all checks would be countersigned by one of the British consuls. The rate payers would have the right to settle the budget and the right to veto and the audit of the accounts would be the joint work of the Chinese and British.

Marines Leave Honolulu.

Honolulu, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Twelve hundred United States marines from San Diego, Calif., sailed westward toward China today aboard the naval transport Chaumont with their destination an official secret. When the transport put in here yesterday, it was expected she would receive definite orders to proceed either to the island of Guam, or to China, dependent upon how serious the authorities at Washington regarded the antiforeign situation in China. Persistent rumors that the Chaumont was bound for Shanghai could not be verified.

(By the Associated Press.)

Arrival at Shanghai of the tanker Pecos with 258 marines was reported yesterday to the Navy Department. The vessel left Manila February 4.

The Navy Department expects the marines to be distributed aboard the navy vessels at Shanghai. They are not expected to be landed unless there is active peril to American life and property.

WIFE-SLAYER GIVEN LONG TERM IN PRISON

Wilson, N. C., Feb. 10.—After pleading guilty to a charge of second degree murder in connection with the slaying of his wife and father-in-law, Alvestra Ayres was sentenced to 20 to 25 years in State prison by Judge R. A. Nunn, in superior court here today.

The shooting took place at the home of William D. Starling, the father-in-law, on August 24. Ayres first shot his wife in a room of the home and then wounded Starling while attempting to escape. Both victims died later in a local hospital.

Ayres surrendered to police while they were scouring the country for him. He made a complete confession, officers said, claiming his wife's alleged unfaithfulness led to the shooting.

IMPROPRIETY AT DANCES IS CHARGED BY MUSICIAN

Walker Tells Trade Board Group What He Saw at Student Functions.

TO STUDY DIPLOMA MILL

Charges that improper conditions exist at social functions given under the auspices of "a certain Washington university," were made by "Happy" Walker, dance orchestra director, before a meeting yesterday of the universities and schools committee of the Board of Trade in the board rooms.

"I would hate to think that the daughters or sisters of any board member had ever attended any of these affairs," Walker, whose real name is H. W. Hullinger, told the committee. "I am not speaking of conditions in general, but of specific functions of which I have first hand knowledge." He said that the fraternities at the school in question were not involved.

Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of George Washington university, who presided during the meeting, declared the matter open for discussion if such was the will of the committee, but expressed the opinion that Walker should present his charges to officials of the university involved rather than to the Board of Trade. The question was dropped for lack of discussion. Walker said later that he did not intend to carry the matter further.

The meeting was called to consider what action the board should take toward regulation of the activities of so-called diploma mills and "fake" universities. David Robertson, of the American council of education, told the committee members that American degrees were coming into disrepute in foreign countries because of the lax laws regulating the issuance of diplomas in this country. Several institutions in question, he said, imitate recognized universities in everything from school yells to honor fraternities. He cited legislative steps taken in States to curb "purchasing of diplomas."

The committee moved that an intensive investigation be made of the matter by a special subcommittee to determine on a legislative remedy. It was pointed out that the Washington Chamber of Commerce and other organizations had expressed themselves in the matter, and the subcommittee was instructed to approach them with a view to joint action. This step, however, must await authorization by the executive committee of the board, which will hold a meeting Monday afternoon.

Dr. Lewis, who will act as chairman of the subcommittee, named James Brown, F. C. Daniel and Edgar F. Fowler to serve with him.

HOUSE ASKED TO VOTE AGAINST THIRD TERM

two terms and more than twice as long as the nineteen other Presidents who have served single terms.

"To launch the ship of state on an even keel in the perilous first voyage it took George Washington but eight years in office. In a similar period of but two terms Thomas Jefferson laid the foundations of genuine democracy and added an empire to our country; Jackson broke the grip of the private banking power on the young republic and put down nullification; Cleveland and Wilson in this same limited period did their work and passed from the public stage, and it took Abraham Lincoln only four years and one month to save the Union in its greatest crisis.

"Are we to be told today that we are so bankrupt in statesmanship that only one man in either party has the patriotism and ability to serve his country as President and that his undertakings and achievmeents in the public interest are so vast as to require ten years for their performance?

"When President Coolidge concludes his second term of office, March 4, 1929, he will have served six years, or longer than all our Presidents save nine, and within two years of those who served two full terms. Of the 29 great Americans who have occupied the presidential office in all our history the average tenure has been less than five years. At the end of his present term President Coolidge will have served longer than this average tenure.

"Is six years in the chief office of the republic to be spurned as a meager and unworthy bestowal of honor and power on the part of the American people?

"The resolution I have offered, if allowed to come to a vote, would, in my judgment, receive the approval of the House as now constituted with the same unanimity with which it was adopted in identical terms half a century ago. On the latter occasion it was offered, considered and adopted on the same day, under the rules in force.

"If the resolution is not permitted to come to a vote at this session, I shall again offer it with full confidence that it will be adopted at the December session of Congress."

The text of the Beck resolution follows:

"Resolved, That, in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

HEADLESS, ARMLESS BODY OF GIRL FOUND IN RIVER

Corpse, Legs Broken at Hips, Floats Through Grounds of Women's College.

NO STUDENT IS MISSING

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 10 (A. P.) The decapitated and partly dismembered body of a girl was found today in the St. Joseph river near South Bend and the police tonight were working on a theory that it may be the body of one of four girls or women reported missing in this vicinity during the past few months.

Identification was impossible as the head, shoulders and arms were missing. The body was sighted in the river where it courses through the grounds of St. Mary's college and academy, institutions for girls, by several small boys playing on the bank. None of the students is missing, officials said.

The body was almost nude except for a few strips of an undergarment. The legs had been broken at the hips and bent backward, apparently having been bound to the torso, although they were not so fastened when found. This led authorities to believe that those who disposed of the body had intended placing it in a trunk or other receptacle.

Police said the body had been in the water for a long time and that if the head and other parts were also placed in the river, they might be at any point between South Bend and the source of the river at Three Rivers, Mich.

One police theory is that the body may be that of Miss Geraldine Way, of Chicago, high school girl, who disappeared last August after going to Mishawaka, Ind., 4 miles east of South Bend, to visit relatives. The police were also attempting to determine if the body be that of Mrs. Mildred Smith, of San Diego, Calif., who with her husband and two children came to South Bend during the Christmas holidays to visit relatives. She vanished after starting for a beauty shop. Two other women living in or near South Bend also have disappeared within recent months.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE?

President Coolidge's message to Congress, transmitting a copy of his proposal to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan in regard to further limitation of naval armaments, has come as a surprise, notwithstanding the intimation in his annual message that he hoped that another conference might be held. Mr. Coolidge's proposal is that the powers named should authorize their delegates at the forthcoming meeting of the preparatory commission for the disarmament conference at Geneva to negotiate and conclude an agreement for further limitation of naval armament, covering classes of vessels not covered by the Washington treaty.

The principal classes of vessels that would come under consideration are cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

The discussions already held at Geneva disclose that the nations are not ready for general disarmament. It is well known that the preparatory commission has been deadlocked. The United States, while cheerfully participating in further efforts to formulate a disarmament agenda, has ascertained that conflicting interests in Europe stand as an effectual bar to any general disarmament agreement. But Mr. Coolidge thinks there is a possibility of making progress by separating the elements of the problem and bringing about an agreement by the leading naval powers which will put an end to the danger of competitive building.

There is a vital difference between the present situation and that which existed when President Harding called the Washington conference. At that time the United States was about to become the strongest naval power. Now it is second or third in the list. Then it was to the interest of Great Britain and Japan to agree to the proposal that the powers should call a halt in the construction of battleships. By making the agreement they prevented the United States from outstripping them; and the United States, for the sake of promoting world peace, was willing to forego the advantage of having the strongest navy in the world.

Now that the United States navy no longer threatens to become stronger than any other, and is actually much weaker than the British and Japanese navies in cruiser strength, Mr. Coolidge's proposal will serve as a test of the willingness of Great Britain and Japan to do away with further cruiser construction for the sake of promoting world peace. If the rapid construction of war vessels by the United States in 1922 was a contributing cause of international suspicion and discord, the rapid construction of war vessels now by other nations is equally so.

Great Britain and Japan have tried to make clear the idea that they are building only according to their own needs, and doubtless that is the truth. The proposed construction of three new cruisers by the United States is based upon the needs of this country, and not upon any idea of competition. Nevertheless the defense measures of every nation must be made according to the possibilities of offense by others, and thus navies are brought into comparison. Indeed, the proposal now made by Mr. Coolidge is based upon the hope that limitation will be established on a basis of comparisons. There is no other practicable method of reaching an agreement. Therefore, if Great Britain and Japan should agree to confer on the cruiser question, it is reasonable to presume that they would not object to an agreement looking to an increase of United States cruiser strength to a point comparable with their own.

A formidable obstacle to the proposed agreement is the attitude of France and Italy on the question of submarines. Their defenses require submarines, and they have refused to consider the abolition of those vessels. It does not seem probable that those nations will begin negotiations which have for their object a limitation upon submarine building. But perhaps Mr. Coolidge has concluded that it will do no harm to ask the leading naval powers to confer. If they should refuse, the world would at least know that the United States stood ready to do its share in removing fears aroused by the building of warships.

Pending the holding of the proposed conference it would be well for the United States to continue the construction of cruisers, which it will need in any event, and which it would be permitted to build under any conceivable agreement. It must build many more before it will be on a plane of equality with the strongest naval powers; and no nation has suggested that the United States should occupy a position of inferiority.

A BUREAUCRATIC DICTATORSHIP.

In spite of the strong support for the McNary-Haugen bill by leaders of farm organizations, there is an absence of enthusiasm among the farmers themselves. A large part of the agitation for the measure emanates from country bankers who find that they are the unfortunate holders of slow second mortgages on farm lands. The market for farm lands is depressed, due largely to reaction from the war and post-war inflation and speculation. It is an open secret, too, that there has been bad management in some of the joint stock land banks, and even in some of the farm land banks, and that foreclosures by these institutions, coinciding with the receiverships of a large number of badly managed small banks in certain Western and Southern States, have produced a difficult land situation.

This is a serious problem which needs the attention of banking authorities. By cooperating with the farmers they can bring about better conditions by better banking and more conservative valuations. But when it is proposed to revolutionize the historic economic policies of the government, to valorize commodities for the purpose of valorizing land, and to adopt all the other nostrums that are being put forward, the price is too high for the country to pay.

There are numerous boards and commissions in Washington created by various acts of Congress. But there is no evidence that any of them would dare say that it would be capable of successfully administering the functions which the McNary-Haugen bill proposes to lodge in the new farm board. An idea of the sort of ability the government can command for the proposed board is afforded by reviewing the personnel of the boards that now exist. In the course of time the new board will be no better than the average of the existing boards and commissions, as to which Congress speaks in terms of condemnation whenever it speaks at all. But, when legislation proposing the creation of new boards is under consideration, those who advocate them seem to proceed on the assumption that they will be manned by supermen. If the ten best bankers and business men in America were invited to sit on the proposed farm board, and they were to accept, it is safe to assert that they would announce after their first conference that the functions with which it is proposed to charge them could not be successfully administered. But the McNary-Haugenites go ahead on the theory that the new board will be perfect.

The agricultural situation has become a political football. It is being exploited by politicians. It is time that the sane and responsible members of Congress called a halt to this form of exploitation.

This situation is not new in American history. Politicians seek to ride into office by offering quack cures for economic maladies. Greenbackism was one attempt, and free-silverism was another. Other "isms" have been offered to the country by politicians at various times, and it is to be hoped that McNary-Haugenism will suffer the fate of the previous isms and be thrown into the discard.

The McNary-Haugen measure proposes to lodge the solution of great economic questions in a government bureau. This drift toward paternalism, so evident in this country, is a confession of the weakness of the people in tackling their own problems. There is no denying the fact that an increase in the power of the central government means a decrease in the liberty of the people. The weaker the people become, the stronger the government must become, and centralized power means the loss of liberty.

Dictatorships are repugnant to the American people. Yet it is proposed to increase the powers of government bureaus for investigating, supervising, regulating, subsidizing and valorizing, thus creating a new and modern form of bureaucratic dictatorship.

CLEANSING NEW YORK'S PLAYS.

There is still a sense of decency existing in the city of New York. The growth of salaciousness in matters theatrical gags even the case-hardened city fathers. Soon after Mayor Walker succeeded to the post which Mayor Hylan was compelled to vacate, announcement was made that the end of indecency on the stage was in sight. Conferences were called in order that the mayor and his official family on the one hand, and the theatrical producers on the other, might get together and talk it over. The result of these talks was a general agreement to "cleanse the Augean stables." But the producers know their public, and some of them were determined to give them what they wanted, in spite of the warnings which were issued.

Two of these indecent plays were recently "acquitted of immorality." One of them has been running for ten months. Another has enjoyed popularity for about half that time. A third production is in its third week. And while the citizens play juries were apparently indisposed to interfere with the continuance of the performances, Chief City Magistrate McAdoo decided to act. He issued warrants on Wednesday and the police served them, arresting producers, managers and actors after the curtains fell that night. It is announced that the arrests will be repeated as often as the curtain rises, unless the objectionable sections of the plays are cut.

In the meantime other producers have declared their intention to present something worse than any of the three. According to the officials, who have witnessed a performance, it is presumably designed to drag into the gutter the last semblance of decency left to actors and audience. That criticism may be considered too harsh, but in any event the district attorney and the police of New York have determined that the play shall not be exhibited in any theater within the jurisdiction of Mayor Walker. It is to the credit of the owners of the theaters in the big city that thus far the producers have been unable to persuade any one of them to rent his building for the production of this foul thing, and it is to the credit of Mayor Walker's administration that the police department and the district attorney are in complete accord in their determination to eliminate filth from New York's theatricals.

REVOLUTION IN TILLAGE.

In starting his idea of reform in land tillage, Henry Ford lays down a basic hypothesis which is practically unassailable, when he says that many farmers have to work too hard in order to produce their crops. With all the alleviations that inventions of new agricultural machinery and improvements in older appliances have brought, farming, as now practiced, is still back-breaking, leg-wearying, and hand-callousing work; and the uncertainty that nearly always prevails as to yield and prices makes it nerve-racking as well. It is all very well for the urban newspaper humorist to poke fun at the denizens of rural communities over their automobiles, their radio sets, and their electrically lighted homes, but, taking one consideration with another, the farmers' lot, no more than the erstwhile policeman's, is not, as yet, at least, an entirely happy one. He does, indeed, comply with the biblical injunction of earning his bread in the sweat of his brow, but the unfortunate part of the business is that he has to lose far too much sweat.

Henry Ford is represented as expressing the belief that the work of producing any of the staple crops, to which the farmer has now to give a whole year, can be done in twenty days or less, provided there is thorough organization, intensive specialization, and the employment of labor-saving machinery. If it is true, as stated, that he has purchased some thousands of acres for trying out his theories, and if he succeeds in proving that these theories, so far from being chimerical, as at first blush they seem, are capable of being reduced to practice, he will have conferred a great boon, not on the farming community alone, but also on the whole nation. It stands to reason that reduction in cost of production will enable the farmer to make a fair profit, and that the economies effected will eventually have to be shared with the public, and thus make for lower commodity prices.

Should that happy day ever arrive, the late Sir Rider Haggard's "Farmer's Year," a really practical book at the time it was produced, will have to be entirely recast and rewritten in order to bring it up to date.

THE NEW BOTANIC GARDEN.

William E. Parsons, the consulting landscape architect who has been commissioned to prepare plans and estimates for the enlarged Botanic garden, is in Washington in consultation with Architect Lynn, of the Capitol, and the members of the joint committee on the library, who must pass upon the designs before the committee on appropriations will act. Mr. Parsons' sketches for the modern conservatory that is to take the place of the dilapidated old structure meet with the cordial indorsement of all who have seen them. Mr. Parsons has made plans for the complete layout of the new garden, and has completed the estimate of the cost of the buildings and the landscape work.

The sketches and estimates will be submitted for action of the joint library committee and after being approved by that committee they will be referred to the appropriations committee. The latter is expected to include in the general deficiency bill the amount authorized to be paid for the two squares of land, authority for the purchase of which has been granted, together with a sum sufficient to proceed with the building operations this spring, or as soon as the titles to the lands can be perfected. Because of the danger to the priceless collection of tropical and semi-tropical plants contained in the main conservatory and the impossibility of replacement in case of loss by storm or fire, the members of the library committee are particularly anxious that the necessary funds to assure that preservation shall be made available at once.

It is expected that the approval of the Parsons plans for the layout of the grounds and the location of the new buildings will be forthcoming at once. The appropriations committee is ready to provide the funds, and it may therefore be expected that substantial progress toward the creation of the new Botanic garden will have been made before Congress reassembles in December.

WASHINGTON'S NEIGHBORS.

A suggestion that a county manager be appointed for Fairfax county, Va., has been made to the chamber of commerce of that community. The proposal contemplates enactment by the State legislature of a law authorizing boards of supervisors to appoint a manager in any county where the people so desire. This action would not make an appointment compulsory, but would permit those counties where the development is largely urban to adopt a government more in keeping with their actual needs and problems.

Arlington and Fairfax counties, Va., and Montgomery county, Md., have been brought to a sudden realization that neighborship with Washington has carried with it unusual responsibilities and peculiar problems. The Capital has spread beyond its artificial boundaries. Industry, unable to establish itself satisfactorily within the District, has begun to place its structures on the other side of the boundary lines, where it has few regulatory laws to observe. Clerks and other workers, discouraged at the comparatively high prices of urban real estate, have purchased home sites and established communities in neighboring counties but demand city conveniences. These and other things make the problems of Arlington, Fairfax and Montgomery counties different from those of other counties.

It has been apparent for some time that the practice of incorporating small communities so that they may levy taxes for such necessities as street lighting and water main extension tends to create an intolerable situation in which cooperative effort is impossible. Montgomery county is mulling over the idea of a central government at the present time. The Fairfax plan to create a county manager is an attempt to solve a similar problem in a slightly different way. It should be given the most serious consideration, for the time is not far distant when definite cooperative action of one sort or another will have to be taken.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Monkey Theory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you kindly permit me to say a word or two to your correspondent who signs himself "Louis Hogrefe" and who claims to be an American citizen by choice? He enters a protest against the enactment of laws forbidding the teaching of evolution in the public schools, saying "No other civilized nation has made itself so ridiculous in this respect." He also says: "Many of the sponsors of these bills claim to be of divine origin. Undoubtedly that may be true, but why brag about it?"

If a man believes he is of divine origin and says so, it is not necessarily bragging. If your correspondent believes he is descended from a monkey, certainly he has nothing to brag about. Neither has the monkey. As an American citizen by birth, a descendant of a long line of American citizens, I am opposed to teaching evolution in our graded schools. It has no place there. It is not a part of the primary education. If one wants to study it he can do so after leaving school.

There is one thing about the advocates of evolution that is very amusing. They cry out "intolerance," yet they themselves are the most intolerant men alive. Those of us who believe man is of divine origin are perfectly willing that Mr. Hogrefe, or anybody else, may believe his ancestors were monkeys. That is a right they have, but they have no right to teach the monkey theory to children.

AARON THORNDIKE.

More Fool Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A firearms law of the same type as the narcotic and prohibition laws, none of them worth a snap of the finger for effect. The only ones that suffer are the 100 per cent citizens.

A respectable citizen may think it necessary to have a weapon in his home for defense. This can be allowed and recorded. The nature of his business may make it expedient to be armed at times. A permit would cover this. With others: an alien, deportation (outside of commitment of crime); a citizen, a stiff penitentiary sentence where weapon was not actually used, where it had been used 20 years, not only for the user but for the entire gang present. In case of injury, life or the chair, not only for the guilty individual but for all companions participating. If a law is to be a law make it one. Get away from trying to make commandments. The Almighty in all His power could only find ten useful ones.

FRED T. HAFELFINGER.

Down With the Trees!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The beautiful shade trees lining the streets have long been the pride and boast of Washingtonians. They have hitherto been a major part of the beauties of the city. Beauty, however, must give way before the march of progress, and double-decked buses are visible evidence of progress. A distinguished scientist once said that were it not for its shade trees Washington would be an unlivable place; that the trees clear the atmosphere of malaria which otherwise would feed on humans. Health, beauty, must give way to utility as exemplified by double-decked buses. Let the trees go! Let the buses have free course!

R. T. JOHNSON.

Making Things Worse.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Legislators are about to do something for the farmers about the same way they have done something for the temperance people, viz: By making things worse. Some say that $10,000 a year for three months' work is too much money for alleged legislators during "economical times," but if they were on the job a whole year we would all have to move from a "free" republic to a kingdom or empire to look for a better brand of "freedom."

The Post editorial headed, "The McNary-Haugen Bill," contains more "horse sense" on that measure than was displayed against or for it under the dome of the Capitol.

Laws that people want seem to be hard to get, while they seem to be flooded with those they don't want. As long as we send "prosecuting attorneys" to do legislating we are going to have investigations galore, because that is their specialty, and desired legislation is bound to get it in the neck.

A. T. M'CCNVEY.

Says China Is Ungrateful.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a reader of The Post, I see that one of the absorbing questions of the day is the action of the Chinese. To know the Chinese mind, as well as any one can know it, one must live among them many years as the writer has done; speak their language and mix with them freely. When we do this we find that the Chinese now are as they were in the time of Bret Harte, though with a touch of foreign education which in many cases seems to harm them more than it benefits.

Like the serpent which the plowman concealed and took to his fireside to thaw out, and which then turned on him, the Chinese may turn on those who attempt to aid them. At the Baltimore conference and since, from time to time, the Chinese have insistently referred to "unequal treaties," and "unjust" and "oppressive" treatment, and yet it is to be deplored that not one word in print came from them as to the kindness the United States has shown to China.

This, too, on top of the last payment of the Boxer indemnity, all of which the United States has refused to take, turning it back to China. The Boxer uprising was not, like the mobs of today, instigated by Chinese officials of southern China, but was a wholesale, atrocious murder of foreigners by the empress dowager herself in Peking The indemnity load which China has labored under has been justly and richly earned.

Look at the thousands upon thousands of sick people in China treated without charge by American doctors, and the millions of dollars expended to save China's starving people during their frequent famines. These famines China herself could alleviate if she had the honesty and heart. What greater proof of friendship could China ask than this? What "unjust, oppressive" and unequal treaty has the United States put upon China? These accusations resemble a great cloud of mist, which they do not undertake to substantiate by facts. It is certainly not just, nor is it right to accuse a nation without signifying a specific charge, and it is not fair to the United States.

JUSTICE.

They Overlooked Something.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you not warn Congress that unless it moves quickly in providing ways to distribute the surplus it will miss a dollar or two? Figuring the surplus as given by Secretary Mellon at $350,000,000 and adding up the bills for its disposal now pending, I find that use has been found for $349,997,000, leaving $3 they did not catch. Let them be up and doing.

Defining Righteousness

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHEN the world was young and nobody took orders from anybody else, there was a great deal of rough stuff in the jungle and everybody agreed that something should be done about it.

Somebody suggested that the creatures meet and draw up a constitution and by-laws, and at an appointed time they gathered in a clearing near the lion's home to see what could be done. When a chairman had been appointed, the rabbit thumped the ground with his hind legs to attract attention and spoke as follows:

"I am a lover of peace," said he. "I have never jumped on anybody, or scratched anybody, or chewed anybody. It seems to me that we need a law requiring everybody to let other folks alone and be content to eat clover."

"That," interrupted the fox, "is quite obviously foolish. The pretty clover is nice to roll in, or even to hide in when it is high; but why anybody should be so degraded as to eat it, I can not understand. The only diet for a proper gentleman is meat—goose, say, or er-rabbit."

"As for me," growled the lion, "I can not catch a rabbit; and what is one morsel when one is hungry? It is unmanly and unrighteous to eat the little creatures that are very fleet of foot. I prefer a fat ox, and I have little respect for the piety of those who eat either rabbits or grass."

"Meat eater!" sneered a great voice. "Perhaps you would like to try a fat elephant. Eh? Your father tried it, and died for his sins. The natural food, and the only one to be eaten without sin, is green; and they are greatest in righteousness who eat the young leaves from the tops of tender saplings when the grass is too short to pluck.

Well, you know how it ended. Each of the creatures defined righteousness and good taste and justice to fit his own appetites and limitations, and that broke up the meeting.

And that's the reason there is now no law in the jungle and the reason why one who walks alone there at night has need of a sharp eye and a big stick.

As a measure of economy, why couldn't the boys graduate directly from short pants to golf?

If he borrows on his life insurance, the chances are 367 to 1 that he is borrowing from his widow.

Correct this sentence: "I am 30 years old and unmarried," said the girl, "but I never mind giving my right age in the polling station, no matter how many are present."

PRESS COMMENT.

Staggering Is Right.

El Paso Times: Although many of the wets insist that prohibition is too heavy a load, it might be pointed out that the country is staggering along under it.

50-50.

Flint Daily Journal: Science tells us that 40,000 germs are transmitted by a kiss. Give 40,000; take 40,000—it's a 50-50 proposition.

Alimony Forever!

Springfield Republican: The attack on alimony in the New York legislature is an assault on one of our most prosperous American industries.

Borah's View's.

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: Nobody is qualified to say much about the views of William E. Borah on comparative eschatology. One thing is sure. If he pictures a hell, it will be a place where everybody agrees with him.

Looks Normal.

New York Evening World: The South Dakota co-ed who tried to rob a bank and was caught because she dropped her hat and ran back for it has been adjudged insane. Such a flying in the face of absolute proof of feminine normalcy there never was.

Not a Bad Thing.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: The cost of living in American cities will rise, and this will result in a decrease in the amount of money wage earners and salaried employes will be able to spend upon luxuries. Carl Snyder economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, predicts for the not-distant future. Prices will rise in the cities, he says, because of the steady drift of the farm population to urban centers. Two and a half million persons have left the farms since 1920; and this, he holds, has decreased the active farm workers by from 8 to 10 per cent. If Mr. Snyder's prediction comes true, it may not be a bad thing. It may serve to solve the farm problem, but it will doubtless create others equally puzzling. And yet when we consider that this country spends eight or nine billions a year for the maintenance and replacement of automobiles alone, it does not appear that a slight economic adjustment caused by a rise in the cost of living would cause a great deal of suffering.

Immunity.

Arkansas Gazette: A noted jurist recently declared that innocent men are seldom imprisoned. They share about the same immunity as the guilty.

Fiery Chariots Approved.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: In a religious revival at Magnolia, Miss., the penitent people brought their playing cards, phonographs, radio outfits, the celebrated Book of Knowledge and everything else that demoralizes and makes us worldly, and threw them on a bonfire. Then they went home in their automobiles.

Baseball and Taxes.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Commissione Landis has just finished checking u baseball matters that were nine yea old. At last reports the governme income tax accountants were still little ahead of him.

Futile Discussion.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The Ma Democrats are discussing very s ously what candidate for Presid their delegates shall support at next national convention. If t were any chance the State would him its electoral vote, the influ they can exercise on the choice m be greater.

The Perfect Shortening

Cudahy's Puritan Lard has won distinction as "The Perfect Shortening" because of its unequalled baking and cooking qualities. It has that essential grainy texture which assures perfect mixing with other baking ingredients.

Puritan Lard makes light, fluffy, fine grained cakes, and pies with rich, tender, flaky crust that melts in the mouth. Unequalled for deep frying as it quickly forms a golden brown seal around the food which keeps in all the natural flavor, prevents absorption of lard and assures rich, tasty cooking.

Puritan is 100% pure leaf, open kettle rendered and free from moisture. It does not smoke at cooking temperature, will not absorb food flavors and may therefore be used again and again. At your dealer's.

Ashland, N. H., Feb. 10 (By A. P.)—Emil St. Goddard, of Lee Pas, Manitoba, drove his team of seven dogs across the finish line of the first day's leg of the New England dog sled races here at 2:19:30 this afternoon. His elapsed time over the 36½-mile run from Wolfeboro was 3 hours 19½ minutes.

Leonard Seppala, of Alaska, whose dash to Nome with antitoxin made him an international hero, was second in, arriving at 2:41:45. His elapsed time of 3 hours 16¾ minutes bettered that of St. Goddard by two and three-quarter minutes. Francois Dupuis, of Quebec, eighth of the 10 to start, was third across the line at 2:47:45. His elapsed time of 3 hours 12 3-5 minutes probably will be the best for the day.

ECONOMICS IN HOME STRESSED AT POST'S FREE COOKING CLASS

Women Are the Nation's Real Financiers, Mrs. Cross Tells 4,000 Housewives.

EVERY FAMILY URGED TO MAINTAIN BUDGET

Balance in Diet Is Emphasized as Bringing Standard of Health.

Declaring that the women of the nation are its real financiers, the 4,000 housewives who have become an established audience attending The Post's free cooking school at the Washington auditorium, were urged to educate themselves in the economical management of a home by Mrs. Lilla P. Cross, nationally known food expert, yesterday.

The third day of the four-day course, which will close today, was marked by an exceptionally gratifying response from the audience, which is composed almost entirely of women, settled housewives, there being no man attending, except occasionally the husband of one of the women.

The school became more like a class yesterday under the tutorship of an exceptionally capable teacher. However, a number of the women attending are admittedly experts themselves. Some of them made suggestions yesterday, writing them out on the white cards distributed for questions from the audience. Mrs. Cross devotes a brief period during each lecture to the answering of questions, and when she came across these suggestions, she read them also. Some of them were addressed to women in the audience who previously had asked questions.

More Freedom Shown.

The general tenor of the school yesterday, therefore, was greater freedom of expression and understanding. It was like a class just getting under way. The majority of the audience were those who have attended throughout, who have literally enrolled for the course. And yesterday the stiffness and silence began to wear away, and in its place came a more facile flow of thought and, as a consequence, greater benefits. Mrs. Cross expressed gratification at the lively response from the audience.

Housewives should educate themselves in the essentials of housekeeping and should learn what is nonessential, also. They should learn what constitutes a balanced diet, she said, and should endeavor to maintain this balance. Care should be taken to obtain a health standard, for this, she explained, is the purpose of the balance. Below the balance would be injury to health by deprivation, and above it waste, disadvantageous to health.

Mrs. Cross took for her subject "The Family Budget." It behooves every family, whatever its income, to keep such a budget, she said. She declared that the greater the income the greater the responsibility attached to the expenditure or disposition of the money, and that the economical management or the home is better, not only in order to prevent waste but because it insures better positive results.

Should Discuss Budget.

The family should get together—father, mother and children—and discuss the family budget, she said, and in this way the children would be disciplined in matters of management and instructed in those principles of adjustment and economy so essential to success in the world of affairs.

She declared that thrift had a complementary side and that children should not only be taught to be thrifty, the objective of thrift week, but that they should be taught how to spend wisely and usefully. Therefore, she explained, keeping a family budget has an ethical side, especially if the children are made members of the board of directors. In a sense, she said, the home should be made a corporation and should be managed according to the manner of a business establishment.

Mrs. Cross declared that the table could be made more economical by varied means of preparing the same kinds of food and that at the same time it could be made far more satisfactory, and that the element of beauty could be added to it. All these things could be had by dexterity of management, she declared, and by the knowledge of how to manage and where to manage.

She urged the women present to take advantage of modern time-saving and labor-saving devices, declaring that they not only brought a saving in the expenditure of money, but that they were health conservers as well.

Mrs. Cross receives a stack of questions each day. The day before, in answer to a question, she explained that the proper way to determine normal weight for a woman is to multiply every inch of height above 5 feet by 5½ and add the result to 110 pounds.

Yesterday she was asked the proper method for determining the normal weight of a woman below 5 feet in stature. She replied follow the same procedure, and deduct the result from 110 pounds. Another question was as follows:

"Can you recommend a salad dressing for a person who is dieting to reduce?"

She replied that there are certain mineral oil dressings that would not build on weight, contrary to the tendency of vegetable oils.

Should Wrap Rolling Pin.

Mrs. Cross declared it is well to wrap the rolling pin in a stocking and canvas in order that the flour would adhere to the rolling pin, preventing an excess being added to the dough for pie crusts and the like.

Today, the last day, two grand prizes will be awarded. Green tickets are given out each day at the doors and from all these tickets two will be selected for the all-enamel gas range and the vacuum cleaner, which will compose the grand prizes.

Those attending the four days will have four opportunities for obtaining one of the grand prizes. In addition, the regular daily prizes of market bags and various other articles will be awarded today on the green tickets.

Interest Is Keen for Last Post Cooking Class Today

Prizes Will Be Given in Addition to Many Culinary Suggestions by Mrs. Cross—Women Ply Expert with Questions.

By NANCY CAREY

Yesterday we heard something of the importance of the budget in the home, and today comes the last and probably the most exciting day of The Post Cooking School—more exciting than the others, possibly, as there are to be prize awards today that will excite breathless suspense at the moment they are given away.

During the period of time devoted to yesterday's class Mrs. Cross, in addition to her running conversation regarding the process of baking and selections of materials, constructed, on the stage a pie that when later viewed at close range promised great delicacy of crust and an inviting interior region. And a ham was baked at the cooking school that rivals even our own long known "ham with pineapple" of considerable fame. The ham was doubtless even better to taste than to look at, as the family of the woman who bore it home with her unquestionably would testify.

Many questions on the subject of cookery and home management were sent to Mrs. Cross during the afternoon, and it is natural that in an assembly of 4,000 women a good many more questions are likely to be asked than it is possible for Mrs. Cross to answer. There were numerous questions on the subject of menu planning for holiday dinners, and questions concerning recipes and the construction thereof that would have consumed the entire afternoon—if indeed Mrs. Cross could have managed to get to them all.

The home efficiency department of The Post is maintained for the purpose of answering all these questions, and if the women of the audience at the cooking school who were not fortunate enough to receive a verbal answer from Mrs. Cross will send the question to the like department at The Post, they will each rceeive an answer, either through the column known as the housekeeper column, or in a personal way through the mail.

In speaking of budgeting and planning the family income, Mrs. Cross again substantiates the teaching of our own department here at The Post, and when Mrs. Cross, having come to us with many years of valuable experience at her finger tips, emphasizes the value of budgeting an income, however large or small it may be, we can not but feel that it is the one and only way to manage things, however loath we may be to get about the business of arranging a budget.

And it was, in addition to the more serious things of which she had to tell us, very interesting to see the manner in which food may be decorated. We have known of gumdrops as a confection, and now we find them to be flowers decorating, with the aid of a few strips of citron, the tops of cakes and tarts and individual pies. The darker outside of the citron is used for the stems of the flowers, and the gumdrops, highly colored ones of the small variety, are easily and delightfully cut into little buds and open-petaled flowers.

Too much has been given us at this cooking school to attempt to emphasize or bring out any particular part as more noticeable than any other part of the program. However, we at The Post wish to say to the women who have attended that we have appreciated their enthusiasm and interest, and appreciated, too, the spirit of their cooperation in making the cooking school the success it has been. We are sorry that it cannot last forever, to be there for reference and information for homemakers, but a smaller edition is available for the homemakers of the city and nearby cities to make use of, and this smaller department will, through the medium of the mails and the column known as the Housekeepers' Column, and through personal interviews, attempt to carry on the work of the cooking school, that opens its last session this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Astor Made Director Over Eastmen Protest

(By Associated Press.)

Vincent Astor, of New York City, was given permission yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission to serve as a director of the Great Northern railroad, although Commissioner Eastman protested.

Astor is now a director of the Illinois Central, and under the law commission approval was necessary before he could serve on the board of another road. Commissioner Eastman refused to comment on his dissent. The commission hitherto has been unanimous in all of its decisions as to interlocking directors.

OFFICIAL RECEPTION FOR DOLLS IN JAPAN

Dignitaries Will Participate in Greeting Gifts From U. S. Children.

Tokyo, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—A public reception is planned at the Imperial theater in Tokyo February 20, in honor of the thousands of American dolls which are arriving in Japan as gifts from the children of the United States to the youngsters of Nippon. Besides the 3,000 children, who are expected to attend the reception, many of the highest officials of Japan will be present to welcome the messengers of peace and friendship from across the Pacific.

In addition to the American Ambassador, Charles MacVeagh, and his staff, there will be present Baron Shidehara, foreign minister; Education Minister Okada, Mayor Nishikubo of Tokyo, and numerous other important Japanese personages.

The dolls will be welcomed with many speeches, to be answered by Ambassador MacVeagh. There will be music by the naval band, and then the Japanese children will receive the gifts sent by their little friends in America.

Both the American and Japanese national anthems will be sung by the children, who, strange as it may seem, know "The Star-Spangled Banner" almost as well as they do Japan's stirring song, the "Kimigayo."

TERROR IS SPREAD AS 60-FOOT WAVES HIT CRIPPLED SHIP

Immigrants Are Told That Liner With U. S. Flag Can Not Sink.

MANY, ON KNEES, PRAY ON PRESIDENT HARDING

Lights Out, Engines Dead, Heat Off in Terrific Storm; Much Discomfort.

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Immigrant passengers who fell praying to their knees on the storm-swept deck of the liner President Harding, when 60-foot waves disabled the ship in a gale at sea, were reassured by a steward who told them that with the Stars and Stripes at the masthead and an American officer in command "the ship can't sink."

The President Harding arrived today six days late after what Capt. Van Beek said was the stormiest passage of his 41 years' experience. On Monday night the waves so battered the liner that rivets were loosened and a leak developed in the fuel tanks which emptied them.

The lights went out, the engines died, there was no heat, and still the great waves crashed against the ship's sides.

First and second-class passengers were quickly convinced that there was no real danger and that at most they were confronted with a certain amount of discomfort, but in the third class occupied mostly by women and children, consternation and fright were general.

Fall to Knees in Terror.

William O'Connor, of Dublin, a third class passenger told today how after being knocked about the tossing ship in the dark, his fellow passengers fell to their knees in terror and prayed.

Then Chief Steward Reupke walked among them, laughing down their fears.

"You're on an American ship," he told them, "sailing under the American flag with an American naval reserve officer in command, and the ship can't sink."

In response to the steward's suggestion that they play some games, O'Connor said the passengers became quited and began arrangements for having concerts during the rest of the voyage.

It was necessary to anchor until more fuel could be brought from Halifax and until the heating plant could be started up again, passengers kept warm by burning the liner's wooden hatches.

Tuesday the President Harding put into Halifax and after a two-day stay, continued here, the 547 passengers completing the journey on board although the United States lines offered them transportation by rail if they wished.

18 KILLINGS ADMITTED BY FORMER OFFICER

Oklahoma Man Is Arrested in Arkansas on Charge of Bond Robbery.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 10 (By A. P.). The killing of eighteen men, most of them while he was serving as an officer, was admitted today by J. M. Saunders, wanted in Oklahoma for forgery, during questioning by Little Rock police and Oklahoma City officers, according to Chief of Police Clark, of North Little Rock.

Saunders is said to have expressed regret for only one slaying, that of a negro. The negro, Saunders said, was shot when he started to take something from his pocket. Saunders thought is was a gun. After he had killed him, however, Saunders said he discovered it was a harmonica. With a woman who claims to be his wife and a man said to be Bud Fondren, also wanted in Oklahoma for robbery, Saunders was arrested after a garage owner had reported that Saunders offered to sell him $23,000 worth of Liberty bonds at one-third face value.

A third man, said to have been Fred Fondren, also wanted in Oklahoma, escaped. The bonds have not been found and officers believe Fred Fondren took them with him.

ORDER OF ELEPHANTS NEW AID TO G. O. P.

Indiana Founders Hopeful of Nation-Wide Spread; To Clean Elections.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 10 (A. P.). This city will be the center of a new Republican organization of notional scope if the plans of those who filed articles of incorporation today for the national committee of the Order of Elephants do not go amiss.

S. A. Haas, Republican district chairman; George V. Coffin, Republican county chairman, and Harry B. Tutewiler, were the incorporators. The organization, they explain, is to be a club with national offices held by Indianapolis men and subordinate organizations elsewhere.

The purposes of the organization, the incorporators said, include the promoting of the principles of Republicanism and the insuring of clean elections. The organization will be open to supporters of the Republican party who are more than 21 years old.

Mr. Tutewiler said the new order would have a ritual, initiation and bylaws.

HUBBARD PAYS $50,000 VERDICT ACTRESS WON

Shovel Manufacturer Drops Plan to Appeal Breach-of-Promise Case.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The Hubbard-Caldwell breach of promise case was settled today when counsel for John W. Hubbard, wealthy manufacturer, handed a check for $50,000 to attorneys representing Miss Anne Caldwell, New York musical comedy actress. The sum represented the damages awarded to Miss Caldwell by a jury. The settlement came as a surprise, for Hubbard had announced he would ask the United States circuit court of appeals for a new trial after a similar motion was denied in Federal court.

Miss Caldwell sued for $500,000, alleging the manufacturer proposed marriage to her in Atlantic City but later refused to wed her. The jury found that a marriage contract existed and, in arriving at the $50,000 damage award, the different amounts suggested by jurors were written down and divided by twelve. In addition to the $50,000 turned over to Miss Caldwell's attorneys today, Hubbard paid the court costs with interest, amounting to $944.

There was a sensational trial in which Miss Caldwell alleged that through the promise of marriage, Hubbard seduced her, and in which the Pittsburgh shovel manufacturer presented many witnesses, including railroad presidents, Allegheny county, Pa., officials, and others.

Hubbard appealed, contending that the court erred in excluding certain testimony having to do with Miss Caldwell's character and the character of her associates in New York and Atlantic City. The court ruled he had a fair and impartial trial, and the motion was denied.

Hubbard's counsel then prepared to go to a higher court, but this step was halted today by the payment of damages. Hubbard, it was said, felt that too many of his friends had been brought into the case and that he desired to avoid further notoriety.

The manufacturer made arrangements to turn over the check yesterday, but withheld it until love letters, produced in evidence by Miss Caldwell, were turned over to him.

COOKING SCHOOL ECHOES

How I make Cakes—perfect every time!

Success depends on following the recipe and method carefully. So be sure to read your recipe and method through to the end before you start to work. Then start your oven, get out all the utensils you will need and grease your pans.

When you grease them with Crisco, you do not need to flour them. Crisco contains no moisture to cause your cakes to stick to the pans and scorch. Therefore, your cakes will come out whole, with no unsightly breaks, and an even brown all over.

Measurements must be accurate

Here is a way I have found to measure shortening accurately. To measure, for example, ¾ of a cup of Crisco, I take a measuring cup, put in ¼ cup of cold water, then add enough Crisco to bring the water to the top of the cup, pour it off, and I have an exact ¾ cup of Crisco.

The importance of the right shortening

I used to make all my cakes with butter. After I began to make my cakes with Crisco, using no butter at all, I found that they were perfectly delicious and my reputation as a cake-maker was just as high as ever. When my Crisco cakes are compared with cakes made with butter, no one can tell the difference.

If you are one of those who simply find it unbelievable that you can use all Crisco in cakes, try half butter and half Crisco at first. Then next time, perhaps, three-fourths Crisco and one-fourth butter. I am sure you will be so pleased with the results, that before you know it you will be using all Crisco for all your cakes.

Importance of creaming shortening and sugar

Not everyone realizes the importance of creaming the shortening and sugar together. The purpose is to soften the grains of sugar, and this is done by beating the sugar with the shortening until the mixture is soft and fluffy, and does not feel grainy to the spoon.

To have your layers even and of uniform thickness, divide your batter in equal parts and spread evenly over the bottom of the pans.

Correct baking temperature important

Up-to-date recipes give you correct temperature. If you are an experienced cake-maker and have never used a thermometer, you, of course, have your favorite way of testing your oven for the proper heat. If not, I advise you to buy an inexpensive oven thermometer. It will be a great help to you.

If you have your own favorite cake recipes, simply use Crisco in the place of the shortening your recipe calls for, adding 1 teaspoon of salt to every cup of Crisco used.

Standard Layer Cake

This recipe can be used as a standard for a variety of layer cakes. It will make a large 3-layer cake, and also six cup cakes. Or, instead of making the cup cakes, you can make four layers, making two cakes of two layers each.

¾ cup Crisco
1 teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups sugar
4 eggs, separated
3 cups pastry flour

Cream Crisco and sugar together thoroughly. Add egg yolks, well beaten. Beat in the milk, a little at a time. Then add ¾ cup flour and beat until smooth. Sift rest of flour with baking powder and salt. Add to mixture and mix thoroughly. Add vanilla. Last fold in well-beaten egg whites. Divide batter into three well-Criscoed layer cake pans and six cup cakes. Bake in hot oven (375° F.), about 15 minutes. When partly cool, turn out on towel. When quite cold, spread filling between and on top of the layers.

Prune Cake

2 cups pastry flour
¼ cup Crisco
1 teaspoon soda
2 eggs (separated)
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
1 cup stewed and mashed prunes
1 cup sugar
½ cup sweet milk
½ teaspoon salt

Cream Crisco and sugar thoroughly. Add egg yolks well beaten. Then stir in prunes. Sift together, soda, spices, salt and flour and add alternately with milk. Last fold in beaten egg whites. Bake in loaf pan, one hour in moderate oven (325° F.).

Be sure prunes are thoroughly drained of all juice.

An Astonishing Blindfold Test

SEE if this doesn't give you the greatest surprise of your whole cooking experience!

Put a little Crisco on the tip of one spoon. On the tip of another place a little of the fat you are now using; have someone blindfold you, and give you first one, then the other fat to taste.

Now, did you ever imagine there could be such a striking difference in the taste of raw cooking fats? Think what an improvement Crisco's sweetness and freshness will make in your own cakes, pies, biscuits and fried foods.

Featherweight White Cake
(above)

½ cup Crisco
1 cup sugar
2 cups flour
3 egg whites
2 teaspoons baking powder
⅔ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon salt

Cream Crisco with sugar. Stir in alternately milk and sifted dry ingredients. Fold in thoroughly stiffly beaten egg whites. Add vanilla and turn batter into two greased layer pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.).

Ice with Seven Minute Icing.

Seven Minute Icing

¾ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar or baking powder
1 egg
3 tablespoons water
½ teaspoon vanilla

Place all ingredients in top part of double broiler, having water in lower part boiling. Beat together until thick enough to spread. Add vanilla.

Precaution—Have fine sugar or melt it in water before adding egg.

To test your cooking fat—taste it raw.

Crisco's superiority will astonish you.

SORRY, SAYS M'CORMICK, IF WIFE PLANS DIVORCE

Nothing in Rumors, However, as Far as He Knows, Chicagoan Adds.

WALSKA, IN PARIS, SILENT

Chicago, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Harold F. McCormick, whose home is in Chicago, but whose wife, Ganna Walska, the singer, is in Paris, came home today saying of reports from New York that she was about to obtain a divorce "there's nothing to it."

Then he added: "As far as I know, there's nothing to it."

Courteous as always, seeking to smile pleasantly, Mr. McCormick, who, in addition to being Ganna's fourth husband, is chairman of the executive committee of the International Harvester Co., stepped off the Twentieth Century limited to be met by numerous inquiring reporters and photographers.

"I know nothing about the divorce rumor because there is nothing to it," he first said, but later made this qualification, "as far as I know."

And when one bold questioner asked if he would be sorry if Mme. Walska should get a divorce, he said earnestly, "Well, you should be sorry if your wife would divorce you—and I would be sorry, too."

Reports from New York were that Mr. McCormick had arranged a substantial property settlement for his wife, and that she would apply for a Paris divorce. But he would neither affirm nor deny any of the reports specifically.

Mme. Walska, beautiful Polish singer, in her operatic aspirations was aided by Mr. McCormick, when he was the principal guarantor of the old Chicago Opera company. She at one time was to sing the role of "Zaza" which was to be produced here, but for some unexplained reason, after the house was sold out she left the city and another opera was substituted.

Mme. Walska was first married to a Russian cavalry officer, whose widow she was when she came to this country in 1915 as a Polish war refugee. Later she married Dr. Joseph Fraenkel, New York neurologist. Alexander Cochran, Yonkers, N. Y., carpet manufacturer, was her third husband. Sixty days after a divorce from Cochran, she was married to Mr. McCormick in August, 1922. He was divorced from Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, six months before he married Ganna.

Dispatches from Paris said Mme. Walska refused to discuss the divorce rumor.

Davis' Heirs Charge Tampering With Funds

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Heirs of the late United States Senator Henry Gassaway Davis have filed suits aggregating $414,000 against the Davis Trust Co., of Elkins, charging that bonds, securities and a trust fund representing that amount had been tampered with and substituted by inferior coal company stocks. It is alleged that the inferior stocks were substituted at the instigation of John T. Davis, son of the late senator, after the son had separated from his wife.

Two suits were brought, one by Mrs. Bessie A. Davis, former wife of John T. Davis, and the other by Henry G. Davis 2d, and his sister, Hallie Davis Percy.

Mrs. Seymour, Former May Davenport, Dies

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Mrs. William Seymour, formerly May Davenport and wife of the director of "Trelawney of the Wells," died at the Hotel Remington here today. She had suffered an apoplectic stroke while attending a rehearsal of the production.

Mrs. Seymour was a sister of Fanny Davenport, noted American actress. She was born in Boston, July 21, 1856, the daughter of E. L. Davenport, famous tragedian, and Fanny Vining Davenport, English actress.

Will Rogers Says Jurors Find His Show Too Clean

Special to The Washington Post.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 10.—Terrible wave of immorality sweeping the stage. My performance in Palm Beach tonight was witnessed by jury of moralists, composed of E. F. Albee, Lee Shubert, Marcus Loew, Adolph Zukor, Edgar Selwyn, Arthur Hammerstein, Joe Le Blanc, Mrs. Stotesbury and Ben Bernie.

They pronounced the performance so clean that it was uninteresting.

GARY'S POST TO MILLER, IS REPORT IN NEW YORK

Former Governor to Be Head of U. S. Steel, it Is Said, Despite Denials.

CHANGE DUE THIS YEAR

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Information that Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors and chief executive board of the United States Steel Corporation, plans to retire within the present year and be succeeded by former Gov. Nathan L. Miller, of New York, comes from reliable sources today, the New York World says.

Diplomatic denials of the rumor are to be discounted, the World states.

Mr. Gary, who is 80 years old, is said to have taken the occasion of his company's recent 40 per cent stock dividend declaration as a logical time for him to relinquish the reins he has held for more than 25 years.

Mr. Miller, who is 58, is reported to be favored not only by Mr. Gary but also by other influential directors of the corporation. His conservative business principles are pointed out as reason for opposition of some of the directors to him.

This very quality is thought to have been a strong point in his selection by Mr. Gary, a champion of conservative business management.

BIRGER LOSES FIGHT TO BLOCK REMOVAL

Professed Fear of Being Slain Is of No Avail for Gang Chieftain.

Benton, Ill., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Charles Birger, southern Illinois gangster, was brought here and placed in the Franklin county jail today while his attorney tried to arrange to furnish bond of $40,000 on a charge of complicity in the murder of Mayor Joe Adams of West City.

Birger, who for six weeks resisted efforts to bring him here because of professed fear of the rival Shelton gangsters, withdrew his application for a writ of habeas corpus in circuit court at Mount Vernon this morning when counsel agreed on bond.

Sheriff James S. Pritchard placed eight special deputies to guard the jail and announced no visiting would be allowed while Birger was there. Birger joked with the officers as they searched him and told them he would make no attempt to escape.

It was disclosed today that Birger also was wanted in this county on a charge of assault to murder in connection with an attack by alleged Birger gangsters upon Mack Pulliam, a Shelton gangster. Bond on this charge was fixed at $2,500.

5 Children of Family Die in Burning Home

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Feb. 10 (By A. P.)—Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Trimble were burned to death in their home at Rudyard, southwest of here, early this morning. Mrs. Trimble, who jumped from an upper window with their sixth child, is suffering from exposure.

The fire, starting from an overheated stove, virtually had consumed the stairway, when Mr. Trimble, carrying Margaret, 8, and Robert, 5, tried to run down the stairs. He stumbled, dropping the children into the flames. Falling into the flames himself, he was terribly burned, but escaped.

The charred bodies of five children, two in their beds, were found after villagers with snow had extinguished the embers.

The Road to Humility

To keep man from bursting with conceit, a philosopher once said, the gods gave us mirrors. We hold that a business like ours, which supplies a fundamental human need, can well afford to hold a mirror up to itself at frequent intervals. For, unlike the case of human features, if a business sees shortcomings in itself, it can rectify them.

Three generations of Washingtonians have bought coal from the J. Maury Dove Company. And if they have found our coal was good, economical coal, and the prices moderate, and the delivery system efficient, it has been because the J. Maury Dove Company hasn't hesitated to keep a mirror handy!

Gentlemen:-

The question of motor lubrication is one to which we give no end of thought, and rightly so, when consideration is given to our extensive fleet of equipment comprised of 350 units, representing a very large investment, and this investment must certainly be protected with the best Motor Oil Lubricants obtainable.

We find that your new oils do as you claim- the formation of a perfect piston seal, improves compression and in consequence greater power and decreased gasoline consumption with crank case dilution minimized, - a smoother and quieter motor, easier starting quicker "pick-up", with gear shifting, particularly in heavy traffic reduced to a minimum.

There is much merit to these new oils and we feel these facts will be of interest not only to your company, but to other operators of large fleets of motor equipment as well.

Yours very truly,
W J Brown
BLACK AND WHITE TAXI COMPANY.

Why all-
Black and Whites
use "STANDARD"
MOTOR OIL

With 350 cabs operating constantly, the Black and White Taxi Company can't afford to take chances with inferior lubrication.

Every expense incurred for individual cabs must be multiplied 350 times. On the other hand, every dollar saved means $350 in the cash drawer.

After exhaustive tests, the Black and White Taxi Company has adopted "Standard" Motor Oil exclusively.

This letter tells why. Read it. Take a tip on lubrication from a company that knows.

1. A perfect piston seal.
2. Better compression.
3. Greater power.
4. Decreased gasoline consumption.
5. Less crank case dilution.
6. Smoother running.
7. Easier starting.
8. Quicker "pick-up."
9. Less gear shifting.

Black and White taxis also
GASOLINE exclusively

COOPER CASE SUBPENAS WILL BE ASKED OF HOUSE

Committee Plans to Call Witnesses; Judge Denies Assisting Drive.

SUPPORTED BY MERRICK

(By the Associated Press.)

The House judiciary committee decided late yesterday to ask the House for authority to subpena witnesses in its inquiry into impeachment charges filed against Federal Judge Frank Cooper, of northern New York, by Representative La Guardia (Republican), New York.

Blanket denial of the impeachment charges was made before the committee yesterday by Federal Judge Cooper.

The judge's statement followed similar testimony by R. Q. Merrick, former prohibition administrator for New York, with whom Cooper was alleged by LaGuardia to have conspired to entrap bootleggers.

Cooper related that in December, 1924, he had summoned Merrick to Albany to suggest a campaign against "higher ups" in bootlegging, but denied emphatically that he had any connection with it other than to promise to help obtain release of any prohibition agents arrested in line of duty. He made that arrangement, he declared, at the request of Merrick who said it was necessary to conceal the identity of the agents.

Merrick substantiated Cooper's testimony, declaring the drive against bootleggers, involving a group of new agents posing as rum runners, was of his own making and that the judge had nothing to do with it.

Merrick, whose appearance was a surprise, said he was summoned from Atlanta, where he is now stationed, two days ago for a conference at prohibition headquarters and had been advised to remain because he might be wanted by the committee. He was invited to testify by Chairman Graham.

Merrick and Cooper both testified over the protest of LaGuardia, who repeatedly demanded that they be sworn and that he have permission to cross-examine them. Chairman Graham refused each time, evoking a discussion among his colleagues as to whether the committee as a whole had decided on that course.

Women's City Club Hears Talk on Siam

Life in Siam was graphically described yesterday afternoon by Col. H. Edmund Bullis, of the general staff, United States army, before the Women's City club. An informal reception followed the address. Mrs. Macpherson Crichton introduced the speaker and later presented various guests at the reception, assisted by Mrs. David H. Blair, Mrs. Robert Imbrie, Mrs. J. Garfield Riley, president of the Women's club; Mrs. Virgil Miller and Mrs. Charles L. McNary.

The lecture on Siam by Col. Bullis was one of a series being given under the auspices of the Women's City club. Last week "Egypt" was the subject, and the next talk will be on "Canada," it was explained.

Pupils Quit Schools; Protest Coeducation

Paris, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—France is having her first school strike over coeducation.

Half the children of Pinet, in central France, withdrew when the boys' and the girls' schools, on opposite sides of the main street, were combined. The schoolmaster in charge of the boys and the schoolmistress in charge of the girls are husband and wife.

Every appeal to the ministry of public instruction to restore the standard system of segregation has failed and the parents are keeping their children at home, employing tutors.

MARYLAND OPPOSES IMPROVING CAPITAL AT LAFAYETTE PARK

Bruce and Lee, at Senate Hearing, Fight Measure to Beautify City.

FEAR "COLD STORAGE" FOR THEIR PROPERTY

Something Must Be Done to Prevent Vandalism Here, King Declares.

The influence which nearby Maryland has over District affairs manifested itself yesterday at the Senate District committee hearing on the Shipstead bill to prevent commercial depreciation of property abutting government buildings and parks.

The bill would provide that any building within 200 feet of a government building or park more than four stories high would have to be approved by the fine arts commission.

It was developed that it comes too late to protect the north side of Lafayette square, but it would protect the east and west side.

Senator Bruce, of Maryland, who heralded his appointment to the District committee at the last session with a statement that he intended to devote his full energy to the beautifying of the Capital, vigorously opposed the measure and declared that while architecture was all right "Washington cannot subsist" on it.

Lee Opposes Measure.

It developed that former Senator Blair Lee, of Maryland, is opposed to the measure.

Mr. Lee, together with Truxtun Beale and Gist Blair, owners of property in the vicinity of the square, declared the bill was designed to put their property in "cold storage," so that eventually when the government decides to erect the State Department building on the west side the property can be bought cheaply.

It was indicated, however, that all of the committee, with the exception of Senator Bruce, favored the bill and would report it in substance. The Maryland opposition aside from its influence in the Senate, however, virtually precludes any chance of favorable action in the House.

Lee Property Inherited.

Senators Harreld, Oklahoma, Sackett of Kentucky, Glass of Virginia, King of Utah and Copeland of New York, took decided issue with Mr. Lee that the bill meant unjust confiscation of their property. Senator King told Mr. Lee he had been convinced for a long time that something had to be done to prevent the "vandalism of Washington by certain real estate men and speculators." Mr. Lee said he was not a "speculator" and that his place of property affected by the bill was inherited.

Mr. Lee insisted that the fine arts commission has already made known that it would not permit buildings of more than 40 feet in height around the square so that to give the commission the authority carried in the bill simply meant decreeing that the property owners could not build any higher. Charles Moore, chairman of the commission, denied that the commission had any such policy and pointed out that it had approved the plans of the United States Chamber of Commerce building, with a height of 85 or more feet.

Amendment by Copeland.

Senator Copeland, of New York, finally proposed an amendment which would specifically permit buildings around Lafayette square 85 feet in height but that their architecture must be approved by the commission. Then Mr. Lee insisted that this same provision, in effect, should apply to buildings all over town. This would virtually nullify the purpose of the bill, it was pointed out.

The 85-foot height around Lafayette square would be permitted because the veterans' bureau, the Chamber of Commerce building, the proposed Wardman apartment hotel and the proposed Treasury annex, on the east side, are of that height.

Senator Glass for Protection.

Senator Glass made known that he was in favor of doing something definite toward protecting Lafayette square. He described the Veterans' Bureau building as a monstrosity.

Senator Shipstead said when he introduced the bill he did not have Lafayette square in mind, but that the thought occurred to him that with the government spending so much money here there should certainly be some restriction as to adjacent private buildings.

Miss Harline James, of the American Civic association, and Frank C. Baldwin and Horace Peasley, of the committee on Washington planning of the American Institute of Architects, spoke in favor of the bill, as did Engineer Commissioner Bell and Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and parks. Action was deferred by the committee.

Woman Signs Tea Shop Lease for $1,000,000

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Although having set a new record for women in business today by signing a $1,000,000 lease for a tea shop, Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall, great-granddaughter of the man who was mayor of New York during the Mexican war, doesn't approve of commercial life for her sex.

"Oh, I think it is terrible for a woman to be in business," was the manner in which she expressed her views. "If she is able to make a success of it, she must wipe out all other interests. She must separate herself from the rest of womankind."

Mrs. MacDougall now is the virtual owner of two large coffee establishments and several tea rooms. The new tea room is to be on upper Manhattan's West Side. In a search for ideas for the conversion of it into a Spanish shop, she is to make a motor tour of Spain.

An invalid husband, who has since died, was responsible for Mrs. MacDougall entering business. Her two sons now are associated with her.

COLUMBIA CAMPAIGN NOW TOTALS $23,567

Hospital Workers at Luncheon Report Their Subscriptions Amounting to $5,365.

Workers in the $150,000 Columbia hospital drive reported subscriptions totaling $5,365 at a luncheon yesterday. This makes a total of $23,567 subscribed. Team No. 1 reported $1,070 subscribed, thereby placing the name of the captain, Mrs. Charles H. Bradley, on the honor roll of teams which have reported more than $500 at a single meeting.

Several captains of men's teams have been unable to report because of their inability to attend the meetings, and it is expected that their reports will swell the subscription total considerably. The women's teams yesterday reported a higher amount than the men, with $2,829 against $2,536.

A luncheon today will be the last this week, the workers to again assemble Monday to report. Several large contributions from friends of Columbia are expected to be reported before the close of the campaign.

CITIZENS ASK PLACE ON ZONE COMMISSION

Cathedral Heights Group Requests City Heads to Appoint People's Counsel.

Declaring the zoning question is every bit as important as the public utilities commission, members of the Cathedral Heights Citizens association in St. Alban's Guild hall last night adopted a resolution requesting the District commissioners to appoint a people's counsel for the zoning commission.

The association adopted a resolution asking the Federation of Citizens Associations to formulate rules of practice governing the people's counsel of the public utilities commission. The manner of preparing and presenting appeals to him is not clearly defined, it was said.

The association approved the Shipstead bill which provides for the approval of the fine arts commission for all buildings erected within 200 feet of a public park or public building. A resolution asking the Washington Railway & Electric Co. to increase the bus service on the Massachusetts avenue line was adopted. Crowded buses in the morning and afternoon rush are dangerous, it was held. W. R. Swanton and John E. Laskey addressed the association.

Pledge to the Public on Used Car Sales

1 All used cars offered to the public shall be honestly represented.

If a car is suitable only for a mechanic who can rebuild it, or for some one who expects only a few months' rough usage on a camping trip, it must be sold on that basis. Each car must be sold for just what it is.

2 All Studebaker automobiles which are sold as CERTIFIED CARS have been properly reconditioned, and carry a 30-day guarantee for replacement of defective parts and free service on adjustments.

This is possible because tremendous reserve mileage has been built into every Studebaker, which it is impossible to exhaust in years.

3 Every used car is conspicuously marked with its price in plain figures, and that price, just as the price of our new cars, is rigidly maintained.

The public can deal in confidence and safety only with the dealer whose policy is "one price only—the same price to all." For, to sell cars on this basis, every one of them must be honestly priced to begin with.

4 Every purchaser of a used car may drive it for five days, and then if not satisfied for any reason, turn it back and apply the money paid as a credit on the purchase of any other car in stock—new or used.

It is assumed, of course, that the car has not been smashed up by collision or other accident in the meantime.

Not only to the public, but also to the Studebaker Corporation of America, whose cars we sell, we pledge adherence to the above policy in selling used cars.

By

Joseph McReynolds

PRICE REDUCTIONS ON NEW CARS have brought scores of car owners to us, all endeavoring to trade in their used cars on new ones. We cannot accept these cars if we are obliged to tie up our money and storage space in exchanged cars.

THEREFORE, we must sell them quickly or sacrifice our new customers and new car profits. Good business demands that we sacrifice these exchange cars, regardless of price!

Those LUCKY Pullens!

by MALCOLM DUART

(COPYRIGHT 1926 BY EUGENE MACLEAN)

Names and situations in this story are fictitious.

THE STORY SO FAR.

Mrs. Fred Pullen has been ostracized by her neighbors in the Capitol Hill section because of gossip by Mrs. Hamilton, a neighbor. Mysterious and costly gifts have come to the Pullen household, following the purchase by Mrs. Pullen of a Chinese lacquered chest, and its later sale to two Chinamen. Her pretty daughter Julia has quarreled with Sam Carlile, neighbor youth, who loves her and who is employed by her father. A young lawyer named Parks, employed in the law office where Julia is a stenographer, has offered to Pullen (for an unnamed client) the mortgage on Mrs. Hamilton's house. He calls at the Pullen home to talk about this mortgage.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLI.

THE three Pullens remained standing while young Mr. Parks, after silently scanning his typewritten memoranda, put on his glasses and examined the papers again.

Then he cleared his throat. "I prepared notes, Mr. Pullen," he said. "It was necessary to be quite accurate." He looked up over the horn rims that pinched his nose in little wrinkles. "You failed to act in time, sir. The offer to you of Mrs. Hamilton's mortgage is withdrawn. Our client has decided not to sell."

"You mean we can't have the mortgage?" asked Mrs. Pullen.

"Precisely, my dear madam. Precisely." Adjusting his glasses, he added: "As an item of information, I have learned that Mrs. Hamilton is not in the city at the moment. In fact, she has gone away."

Mrs. Pullen drew up a chair. "Do sit down, Mr. Parks," said she. "Your legs must be tired. Where did she go?"

He waited until the mother and daughter settled themselves on the edge of the couch. Then he took the proferred seat, carefully drawing up the knees of his trousers.

"I can not say where Mrs. Hamilton is," said he. "An errand took me to her house today—a legal matter. The house was locked. On inquiry next door, I was told that she has been gone for several days, and that Mr. Hamilton is keeping—ha, ha!—bachelor's hall."

"I don't think it's safe to leave a man alone like that," commented Mrs. Pullen.

The young attorney smiled knowingly. "On account of the flappers, Mrs. Pullen?"

"Flappers?" she inquired. "What would flappers care about an old baldhead like George Hamilton? What I mean is, you can't depend on a man to wash the dishes, and he scatters things up and down stairs and all over the house. Why——"

She pointed accusingly at her husband. "One time when Julia was little I went away with her on a visit, and when I came back Mr. Pullen had painted all the woodwork white! Absolutely white, Mr. Parks. And it took him two months to scrape that paint off again, working evenings!"

Her husband shifted restlessly. "I still think it looked nice that way," he declared.

"As if a man knows what looks nice in a house!" snorted Mrs. Pullen. "Men have no taste."

Julia had taken no part in the conversation up to this point. Her mother turned to her now, reprovingly.

"Speak up, child," said she. "Mr. Parks will think you're not able to talk."

"I'm sure," said Parks, gallantly, "that Miss Pullen is a very graceful conversationalist."

"She's like her father," Mrs. Pullen said. "He would sit all evening and never say a word if I didn't stir him up. It must be terrible to be that way, Mr. Parks. I should think it would injure the voice, not using it. Who did you say owned the mortgage on Mrs. Hamilton's house?"

"I didn't say," responded the young man. "You see, Mrs. Pullen, counselors at law are not permtited to reveal the secrets of their clients. As a matter of fact—ha, ha!—" he swung his glasses gaily—"I couldn't tell if I wanted to. Mr. Murty has never told me who the client is. Miss Pullen ought to know." He glanced archly at the girl.

A quiver of vexation showed in Julia's brow. "He doesn't tell me his business," said she. "He hasn't mentioned Mrs. Hamilton to me since the day she came to see him, and he hasn't even given me any dictation for a week. I've been typing briefs."

"I'll bet I'd find out who the client was if I worked there," pronounced the mother. "I never did favor this business of people going around with secrets, Mr. Parks. Do you? It seems so close-mouthed, some way."

The visitor smiled indulgently. "If it weren't for secrets, Mrs. Pullen, we attorneys would have no practice whatever. Other people have secrets; we expose 'em. We have secrets; they try to expose us. And we collect our money either way."

"Well, of course, I suppose lawyers have to live, too," said his hostess. "But if there's anything that makes me boil, it's a secret."

The young man arose to go, and after shaking hands with Mrs. Pullen, held to Julia's fingers for a moment. "Some other evening," he promised, "I'll come to see YOU." He leaned forward to look into her eyes.

"I'm sure that's nice of you and Julia'll be glad to see you," said the mother.

A little later, when Parks had gone, Mrs. Pullen took occasion to reprove her daughter. "Child," said she, "you'll never be married unless you draw 'em on a little. This Mr. Parks is head over heels in love with you. Anybody can see that. Even your father could see it. Why can't you droop your eyelids and give a sad smile or something when a young man promises to come and see you?"

Julia sighed heavily. "What's the use?" she asked. "He'll come anyway."

"But he'll get tired of it, and first thing you know you'll be losing him." She turned to Pullen. "Fred, you talk to her. No matter what I say she won't listen. You ought to do a father's part, Fred. You don't encourage your daughter at all."

His eyes crinkled at the corners in amusement. "All right, Elsie." He prodded the girl with his thumb and continued solemnly, "Cheer up, Julia, the worst is yet to come."

"You act like a fool," said Mrs. Pullen.

Next morning Pullen took away with him his sketches of the proposed new house, tucking them for protection into a mailing tube. Julia, whose mood had been depressed and quiet since Parks' call of the night before, was waiting for him at the curb when he brought the car around.

Mrs. Pullen came down the steps to bid her husband and daughter goodby.

"I'll get the architect to make the drawings," said Pullen. "It won't take long to get estimates—to find out what it'll cost, you know, and then we'll start building right away, if the weather's good."

"There ought to be a little place for the cat, if we get a cat," said Mrs. Pullen, as she kissed him.

The man and girl drove in silence for a few blocks. Julia sat with her chin on her breast, her eyes upon the floor of the car. Her father glanced at her anxiously now and again.

"What's the matter, old kid?" he asked, at last.

She shook her head. "Nothing," she answered.

"Humph!" He turned into F street. "Listen here, is Sam Carlile on your mind?"

Julia did not answer for a time. When she did speak, he had to lean toward her in order to hear.

"Why should I think about Sam Carlile?" she murmured.

"Don't know," said he, "except he's thinking about you all the time."

The girl sat more erect. "If he's thinking about me, why doesn't he come around and say so?"

"I reckon it's because you high-hatted him the last time you met," he surmised. "You told me about that yourself. And, besides, he knows Parks is coming to the house."

The girl looked at him with interest. "How does he know that?"

"Because," he said, grinning a trifle, "every time Parks has been in my office, he turns around and says to me—loud, so Sam can hear—'Be sure to tell Miss Pullen how I enjoyed my last call.' And you ought to see Carlile! Mad? I'll say he's mad."

For some reason this information seemed to cheer Julia immensely. Peering into the rear vision mirror, she adjusted her hair about her ears, straightened her hat, and smiled.

"I hope Mr. Parks calls on you today, too," she said.

"What for?" her father demanded, in surprise. "He's a chump—and he always makes Sam sore."

"Because," said she, dimpling.

He made various futile efforts to get her to explain further, but she declined. As he let her off at the office building where she worked, she bade him goodby, still smiling.

"If you want to, you can mention to Sam that Mr. Parks called last night, too," she told him.

"I won't do it," he exploded.

She laughed then, and blew a kiss to him as he drove away.

* * * *

It was four days later that Pullen came home with fresh word of the new house. His shoulders were drooped as he trudged up the steps, and his eyes were tired.

"What's wrong?" asked his wife, as she met him in the hall.

"Our house," he said, heavily. "We can't build it."

"I just knew that something would turn up," exclaimed Mrs. Pullen. "Things have been going wrong with me all day. I upset the coffee pot on floor, and broke the shade on the kitchen light, and that odious Mrs. Carlile passed me right at my steps and stared ahead at me without speaking."

She paused for breath. "Why can't we build, Fred?"

Mrs. Pullen took occasion to reprove her daughter. "Child," said she, "you'll never be married unless you draw 'em on a little. Why can't you droop your eyelids and give a sad smile or something when a young man promises to come and see you?" Julia sighed heavily. "What's the use?"

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

THE pointer for today is:

A business pass of a doubled No Trump is often justified; but a business pass of a suit-bid rarely is.

The Business Pass is a valuable declaration when the passer is strong and his partner has doubled a bid of one No Trump. In such case, the doubler has shown great strength in the declaration that he has doubled; probably he has a better No Trump than the bidder and, with strength in the answering hand, the No Trump x is sandwiched between two strong hands and apt to be defeated badly. Under such conditions, a Business Pass which may produce hundreds is popular with experts; but there is no excuse for a pass with weakness, the greater the weakness the more important the takeout.

An entirely different situation obtains, however, when a suit-bid of one has been doubled and the partner of the doubler has length in that suit and in no other. When the partner holds five cards of the doubled suit, there may be a natural inclination to permit the double to stand; the thought being that the hand—otherwise worthless—may be of value against the doubled trump, and that the contract may be defeated. This, however, is not a sound conclusion. The doubler may be absolutely void of the suit, and a Business Pass may show the situation to the Declarer and enable him to fulfill his contract—or even make game. The two kinds of informatory double should be distinguished clearly; doubling a No Trump shows strength in the declaration doubled; the suit double generally denies such strength. Business Passes of doubles of suit-bids of one should rarely be made: Business Passes of doubles of suit-bids of two or three are safer, but only an expert can soundly determine when to make them.

This subject will be continued tomorrow, when the question will be: What should a player declare with the following hand, his partner having doubled a bid of one Club made by the adversary on the left.

Beauty and You

By Viola Paris.

WHEN IT COMES TO SPLITTING HAIRS.

PRACTICALLY every ill to which the hair is liable calls for more care, not only of the hair itself, but of the scalp and of the whole body. Healthy hair must grow from a nourished, well-stimulated scalp. And, if the body is tired, or nerve-racked, or under par in any way, the hair, like the skin, is certain to show it.

Suppose your hair has split ends. This is often a fault of dry, lifeless hair. The treatment must go much farther back than the ends themselves. Look to your general health first, and then begin to cultivate scalp health. Massage the scalp well with the fingertips each day, using a good pomade and following this with a tonic. There are special tonics for hair of the oily and of the dry type, and still others for white hair. For dry hair, olive oil and castor oil are both good.

If you arrange your hair in some fashion that has to be "set" each day, as most bobs do, then use your tonic to moisten the hair, rather than water.

Remember that hot olive oil may be rubbed into the scalp the night before the shampoo with excellent effect. Immediately after the shampoo (and don't use artificial heat for drying), work a little pomade well into the scalp.

Split ends may be clipped, but preferably by an expert. The ends should not be cut straight across. The professional runs a comb through a strand of hair, and the ends that rough up through the teeth of the comb are then cut off, a few at a time.

Every other day, treat the dry, split ends with your scalp pomade. Put a bit of the pomade in the palm of the left hand, then rub the ends of the hair between the palms of both hands.

Whether I've given this information before or not doesn't matter. If any one wants to know anything I can tell them, I'll tell it any number of times, with pleasure, and am only sorry the service is sometimes delayed.

In the first place, if you are sharing a cabin with another woman, you naturally speak to her, and according to your liking for her, plus hers for you, your intimacy progresses. If you feel drawn to her and find her pleasant and friendly, well and good; you may expand a little. If you find her disagreeable, or simply stiff and stand-offish, let her alone. The same holds good for your neighbors at table or on deck. If they make advances, and you like them, respond—not too much at first, but politely. If you make advances and they seem inclined to meet them halfway, you may be laying the foundation of a friendship.

Tipping depends a little upon the grandness of the boat and your position. More money is expected from a person in an expensive boat, in an expensive cabin, than from one who takes cheaper accommodations. You tip according to circumstances and the people from whom you require the most service. This is about average: Stewardess, $5; steward, $5; bath steward, $2.50; table steward, $5; dining room supervisor, from $2.50 to $5. You see, he, as a general supervisor, would have a tip from every one, where your table steward only gets money from the group he waits upon. Deck steward, $2.50 for the same reason, unless you have taken meals on deck. Deck boys, $1; luggage men according to the pieces, $1 to $1.50. If you use the library, $1 to the librarian. Add to rather than take away from this.

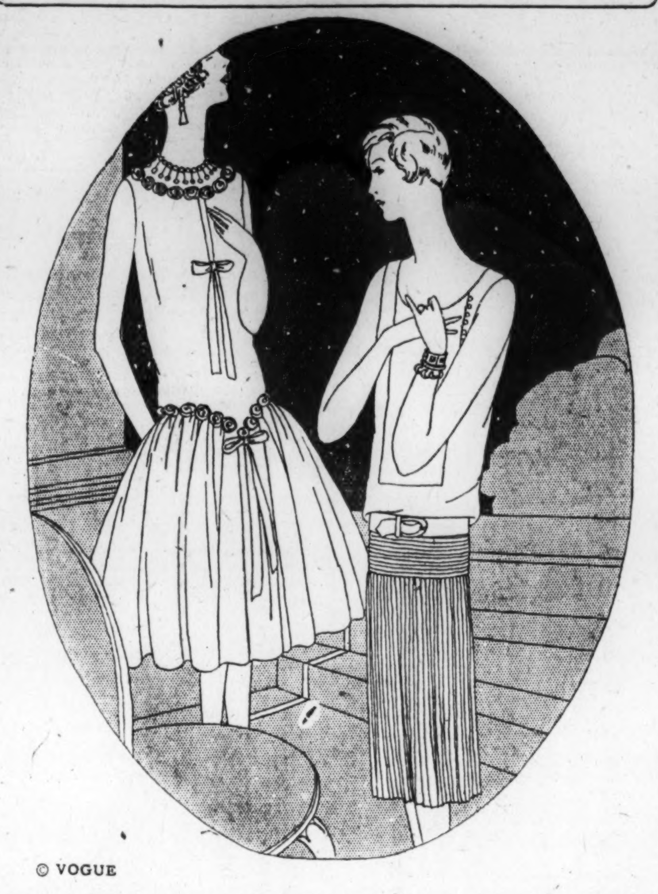
Right and Wrong for Pretty Girl



© VOGUE

EVERY woman has a secret hope that she is pretty, but no woman of discretion wants to be pretty-pretty. And Flora, at the left, has shown that she lacks discretion, for she is pretty-pretty from head to foot. Her curly yellow hair is long enough to stand out to let the light shine through it, because a sentimental young man once compared it to the mist around the moon. Her necklace of pink and white pearls is fussy. She has pink silk roses at the neck and waist of her baby-blue taffeta frock, and has attached bows of baby-pink ribbon besides! Mercifully, her shoes are hidden.

Frances looks at her and wonders why she does it. Frances herself is a very pretty girl, and she is charming in her little frock of melon-pink crepe satin, built almost on sports lines, with its bloused waist, its belt, and its finely pleated skirt. But her prettiness is not the main thing about her; it is only one of her assets. She is poised, intelligent and charming.

WIVES OF TOMORROW

By FRANCES M'DONALD

He Tamed Her

I LAUGH when I read in your columns of the men who set and the girls who pet, and I'll give you the reason why I am the happiest man in the world.

I petted all girls, but in my heart I wanted a sweet, old-fashioned girl. But! I went to a party and met a girl who was the peppiest one there. She smoked, danced, drank, but yet there was something about her that attracted me. She was intelligent, though and a good listener. I fell in love with her immediately and she with me.

That was two years ago. Now you should see her, she uses cosmetics so sparingly, doesn't drink or smoke and blushes at the jokes she once told. But still she is the life of the party and is very popular.

And what a change she has wrought in me. She made me resume the career I had neglected for good times. I wouldn't pet a queen if I had the chance, and I'm off drinking for life. The only thing I'm interested in now is this dear little girl who will soon be my wife. I am making good at my chosen work so that I can make her the more happy. What man could ask more? And who could find more—even in an old-fashioned girl? My one fear is caused by friends who warn me that such happiness can not last and that marriage will prove too much of a test and shatter our dream. What do you say, Miss McDonald? Do only old-fashioned girls make satisfactory wives? Somehow I just could not make myself love one. Have we a Chinaman's chance? I think we have—Am I right?

Right you are, Ray. You know it is unquestionably a fact that the idea so long held by most men that the only girl who made a good wife was the little Miss Sit-by-the-fire, is now recognized as a pretty fiction handed down from a past when there were fires to sit by! A vast amount of present day discontent in marriage is due to man's earnestness in seeking a mouse-like mate and then demanding of her all the attributes of a butterfly. A man recently wrote me that his wife made him sick, but he hated to hurt her feelings by leaving her as she was such a nice girl! He then detailed the good times he had enjoyed before marrying her—and how he had picked a quiet girl who had never run around, because she would make the best wife. He of course did not dream that in picking a girl of that type he was selecting a mate who did not share one single taste of his. He is paying the price of attempting to apply yesterday's traditions to the needs of today. This nice girl will eventually "have her feelings hurt" of course, for the man who likes parties and people, and dances will not be able to adjust himself to the demands of a dyed-in-the-wool home girl. And such a girl should not marry the "life-of-the-party" sort of man. Yet this is precisely the thing that happens when man accepts a tradition moth-eaten and obsolete and endeavors to build his life around it. The modern girl with all her faults is the girl for the modern man. The home girl is great for the home man. But unless you absolutely are a home man 'tis useless and worse to marry a little Miss Sit-by-the-fire. Better to tame a modern than desert an antique. The time and trouble involved in the "taming" are truly well spent. Best of luck Ray—your fears are groundless.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

ON MEDICINE ABSORBED BY THE SKIN.

THE number of letters received by this column in which the writers inquire whether any medicine or chemical of any sort is or can be absorbed by the skin has two meanings.

The first is, a great many people read what is written by Brother Brady. I know from many sources that they are influenced to their good by what he writes.

The second is, the readers of health columns like to shop around, just as most of us do with doctors generally.

Those who inquire about the power of the skin to absorb probably read into Brother Brady's words somewhat more than he intended to put there.

The popular belief in skin foods, skin creams and skin medicines needs to be annihilated. It is the bunk, and the money that is spent on them, to say nothing of the time, is wasted. But it may not be necessary to burn the house down to roast the pig.

The skin is built to keep in what's in and to keep out what's out. Nevertheless, it can be made to leak some in either direction. Inward leaking is called absorption.

One of the late books, written by an authority, and dealing incidentally with this subject is "The Technic of Medication," by Dr. B. Fantus. It tells some of the tricks of the trade in the doctor business. Chapter II tells how the doctor gets medicines through the skin.

It tells the doctor that when he wants a remedy to absorb through the skin into the system he must mix it with fats, such as ointments, or with volatile substances, such as are contained in many liniments. Penetration is favored by thorough preliminary cleaning, by friction, by heat, and by occlusive dressings.

Since a certain amount of absorption takes place, physicians must guard against poisoning. Good illustrations of poisonings which have occasionally taken place are mercurial poisoning, due to the rubbing in of too much mercurial ointments; carbolic poisoning, due to the over use of carbolic lotions, and wood alcohol poisoning, due to the use of liniments in which this poison is an ingredient. He tells us that, contrary to the usual rule with skin applications, carbolic acid in watery solution is more poisonous than carbolic salves.

The section in this book dealing particularly with absorption through the skin is headed "Diadermic Administration." It says: "Diadermic administration is not a quick or a direct way of getting medication into the circulation, but it secures an evenness and constancy of medication that no other route supplies." It then starts in with a discussion of the methods of using mercurial ointments.

Another interesting section deals with the relative value of different preparations. Dog's fat, bear's fat, goose grease, and other animal fats, notwithstanding an ancient and still existing popular prejudice in their favor, do not present any advantages over lard. I wonder if my friend, Dr. Fantus, would permit us to add snake oil to the list?

FOR CRAMPS IN LEG.

C. D. writes: Re your cramp in leg item, I picked up a sure cure many years ago. It costs nothing to try it.

Wake up; cramp in left calf of leg; immediately place bottom of left foot on instep of right foot; press hard on left; pull back hard on right; pain ceases at once; time consumed, about fifteen seconds.

FROSTBITE NOT SERIOUS.

Mrs. F. E. L. writes: In walking home (about a ten-block walk) in zero weather, I think I froze my legs. They have large red patches on them which are hard to the touch and quite painful. Is this condition serious?

REPLY.

Moderate frostbite is not a serious trouble, though it may be annoying.

FOOD FOR 8 MONTHS BABY.

Mrs. A. J. S. writes: Please tell me what foods to give my 8-month-old bottle baby who has no teeth but who weighs 22 pounds and seems to be doing fine. I am worried about the teeth.

REPLY.

Many babies do not begin getting teeth until they are older than 8 months.

A baby of that age should be eating milk, cereal, fruit juices, butter, and mashed vegetables. Is the diet you are giving her liberal enough? If it is, wait a few weeks for development. If there are none in say three to four weeks see your physician about giving her a small dose of thyroid. Many physicians hold that a small dose of thyroid is needed to start the wheels.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

AS IT HAPPENS OFTEN.

She baked hot biscuits in a pan
To suit the fancy of her man.

She set the table, and she stirred
The very custard he preferred.

She hummed a merry little song
And planned for him the whole day long.

She cooked a chicken in the style
Which always starts his broadest smile.

From morning till the day grew dim
She planned that dinner just for him.

Oh, do you wonder women weep
And grumble at the homes they keep?

With all this done for his delight,
He phoned: "I won't be home tonight!"

MODISH MITZI

Signs of Spring

By Jay V. Jay

This is the first tulip of spring blooming in a steam-heated room! Mitzi is surrounding herself with hyacinths, tulips and is going shopping for the first robin in an effort to make her spring clothes seasonable. The sweater frock for instance, has blue stripes the color of the hyacinth.

"One of the smartest necklines I've seen," mentally notes Mitzi as she looks at her slip over sweater with its square neck. A white crepe de chine skirt is worn with it. It's one of the new sports costumes she'll wear when it's warm enough.

The Goofer looked at the spring flowers in the background and mostly, oh yes, mostly at Mitzi in her white cashmere sweater with the orange and yellow stripes and couldn't restrain himself from saying: "It's just like spring, Mitzi." Dad thinks the Goofer ought to take an intelligence test, he's just arrived and is going to take off two mufflers and kick his goloshes into the closet. Spring—well, spring is not for six weeks yet. But one thing he can't deny, his daughter is clever. Given the clothes, she can always create the atmosphere!

Exchange Trade Heavier.

Trading on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday was heavier than on the preceding days of the week and took in a wider range of stocks and bonds.

Capital Traction, which has been recording fraction gains on each day of the present movement, opened with an overnight gain of ¼, with 10 shares recorded sold at 106¼. This was followed by a sale of 50 shares at 106⅛, other sales totaling 35 shares were made at 106, the close of Wednesday, while the final transaction in 40 shares was registered at 105¾, a loss for the day of ½ point, but only ¼ under close of the day before.

Washington Gas Light was in good demand, selling in two lots at 69⅞, while 30 shares changed hands at 69¾. Washington Railway & Electric common came out for the first time since January 20, and 10 shares sold 15 points up, at 200, while Potomac Electric Power preferred was firm at 109¾.

In the bank stocks, while the list was strong throughout, but two institutions were represented by transactions. Second National Bank, which sold the day before at 266, soared 9 points, to 275, on a sale of 10 shares, while Bank of Bethesda climbed 3½ points, to 40½, on opening sale of 5 shares, with a block of 20 shares recorded sold at 40¼. In the miscellaneous list Barber & Ross, Inc., common, which was marketed early in January and later admitted to trading, sold in two lots of 25 shares each at 38¼, and a block of 50 shares changed hands at 38⅛. The stock, which is no par, was sold to the public at $37.50 per share.

The bond mart, as on the day before, proved interesting. Potomac Electric Power consolidated 5s sold at 100⅞, and the 6s at 107½. Washington Gas Light 6s, series A, sold at 104⅛ for $500 and 104½ for the $200 and $100 denominations, while series B sold at 104¾. Capital Traction 5s were firm at 100¾.

The directors met later in the day for organization and all officers were reelected. They are Clarence F. Norment, president; D. J. Callahan, vice president and general manager; Odell S. Smith, treasurer, and C. F. Norment, jr., secretary.

Costello Heads Company.

John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman, has been elected president of the General Securities Investment Corporation, underwriters and dealers in securities, both listed and unlisted. Mr. Costello, who is also a member of the District bar, will maintain offices in the suite in the Vermont building occupied by the Securities Corporation and will pass on the legality of underwritings assumed by the company.

The stock of the General Security Investment Corporation is closely held and will not be offered for public subscription, the company dealing only in the securities of other corporations and underwiriting original issues. It was stated yesterday by Lee Smith, general manager of the company, that announcement soon would be made of the public offering of a preferred and common issue of an industrial corporation engaging in the manufacture of cold creams and special lotions for the skin.

Under the general securities investment plan of management, it was stated that application will be made to list all securities underwritten by or originating with the company, such listing to be applied for on such exchange as will prove most advantageous to the particular type of security and to the investing public.

Banking Group Meets.

With I. J. Roberts, Riggs National Bank, chairman of the educational committee, Washington chapter, American Institute of Banking, presiding, the committee was host last night at a dinner to the faculty, officers and board of governors of the chapter at the Raleigh hotel. The dinner was in the nature of a get-together meeting and while complimentary to the faculty members and purely social the opinion was expressed last night that a wish to do even bigger things in chapter work was inspired and that activities of the second semester will go forward with renewed vigor.

Baltimore Party Tomorrow.

A group of local bankers, institute members, and many of the officers, will journey to Baltimore tomorrow to attend the annual banquet of the Baltimore chapter, American Institute of Banking. As many of the guests at the annual affair in Baltimore come from distant points, plans are under way for their entertainment in Washington on Sunday.

Bulletin Is Distributed.

The February bulletin of the District Bankers association was distributed yesterday. A review of the January activities is made by Howard Moran, president, and other items of interest to member bankers are published.

Increase in Purchases.

Purchases in the East section, in which Washington is included, show an increase over both last week and the corresponding week last year, according to the credit clearing house. Indebtedness is reported less than shown in either comparative period. Payments, while better than last week, were not as good as the corresponding week last year.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Feb. 10 (By the Associated Press).—Scarcity of offerings resulted in price upturns today for wheat. Reluctance to sell was accompanied by talk about falling off in primary receipts and by gossip that farm reserves southwest are as low at present as they generally are around April 1. Wheat closed unsettled, ⅝ to 1c net higher, corn and oats both showing ⅜ to ⅝c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

At first, wheat values tended to sag, reflecting advices of larger shipments from Argentine and also from Russia. Selling pressure here, however, soon lessened and buying subsequently developed enough volume to keep the market pointing upward. This was especially the case in the final half-hour when pit speculators who had been previously sellers reversed their market position. On the whole, nevertheless, trade lacked volume and fluctuations were narrow with but little attention being given today to Washington legislative matters.

Domestic winter wheat prospects attracted more notice in various quarters, particularly India reports that owing to entire disappearance of snow the wheat crop is now exposed to danger of a sudden freeze. Some leading authorities, though, contended that it is to early yet for positive opinions on the home crop outlook; that Texas, the earliest State, has increased its acreage 25 per cent and that the country's winter crop as a rule has a plentiful moisture supply.

Crop futures were in better general demand than of late, influenced by a rise in the cash corn trading basis. Oats followed corn.

Provisions tended upward, sympathizing with an upturn in the value of hogs.

Unfilled Steel Orders Decrease in Month

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation on January 31, made public today, totaled 3,800,177 tons, a decrease of 160,792 tons, compared with the end of the preceding month.

The decrease of 160,792 tons, while larger than the trade generally had expected, is not considered significant, it is said, owing to the unusually high rate of operations at the corporation's plants last month. Another increase for January probably would have been possible if production had been held down to the rate prevailing in December. The decrease for January contrasted with a gain of 153,000 tons for December.

Production and shipments thus far this month are said to be in excess of January's high rate. New business also has increased.

Masters of Music

Ludwig von Beethoven
1770-1827

ALL the ear-trumpets devised by the acousticians of his day could not restore Beethoven's hearing. His incomparable ninth symphony, that the musical world has not ceased to worship, was composed in total deafness.

Beethoven's life is a classic of overwhelming hardships and courageous fortitude. It reads like a romance of fiction.

Today we live in a land of greater opportunities, where talent and merit are usually recognized—and where prudent people devote a part of the income of their most productive years to building financial protection against the impending hardships of later life.

And in making investments for this purpose, safety should be the first consideration. That is why the First Mortgages purchased through Swartzell, Rheem and Hensey Company are the logical investment for you, because time has proven them safe, and, today, they pay 6½% interest.

BUYING INTEREST VEERS TO INDUSTRIAL SHARES

Baldwin Soars, to New High of 180; Steel and Other Standard Issues Steady.

EXCITEMENT IN RAILS DIES

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Feb. 10.—Trading interest veered to the industrials today, leaving the railroad group to shift for itself. Buying enthusiasm, however, seemed not to have been destroyed by yesterday's break in speculative rails; it merely found another outlet. The market was extremely active at times, but the total turnover of 1,952,600 was nearly a million shares below the record of the previous day.

Points of attention during the session were the United States Steel unfilled tonnage report, the French and English bank statements and the meetings of the Federal reserve directors and the General Motors directors. Call money continued at 4 per cent, with cash plentiful on the outside at 3¾.

The fireworks of the session were furnished by Baldwin Locomotive, which established a new high record at 180, after selling as low as 169, and finally closing at 177, a net gain of 8 points for the day in a turnover of 99,100 shares. Shorts were under a severe strain as the price of the stock shot skyward. The floating supply of Baldwin always has been rather small, and it is no new thing for a strong pool to make it difficult for bears. It was reported during the day that the stock was lending at as high as 2 per cent premium. Several weeks ago the air was full of rumors of large amounts made in Baldwin by Western traders. The gradual decline of the stock from the high point reached at that time doubtless encouraged short selling, and now it is said that a pool again is working in the stock.

Pools in a number of other industrial specialties gained a good deal of ground against the shorts and a modest amount of new buying appeared here and there. Net gains in the industrial list extended to six points. United States Steel and some of the other standard issues were steady to lower.

General Motors was fairly steady, awaiting dividend action taken after the close of the market.

The placing of the General Motors common on an $8 annual basis by the declaration of a regular quarterly $2 a share instead of the $1.75 quarterly previously paid was not unexpected.

Farm implement stocks were buoyant. Sugar, tobacco and copper shares were traded in quite actively, with prices moving within a narrow range. Motor shares also moved narrowly.

Excitement in the rail division seemed to have entirely died out. Standard rails were strong, but numerous recessions occurred in the low-priced division, extending to as much as 5 points, the latter in Wheeling & Lake Erie. That stock moved within a 10-point range, selling down to 80, then moving ahead on very small sales to close at 85 in a total turnover of only 600 shares. The preferred moved between 83 and 88, closing at 86, thus again leading the common by a point.

Western Maryland lost 1¾ net, Reading & Kansas City Southern a point, Chicago Great Western 1⅝, Pittsburgh & West Virginia 3⅜, Gulf, Mobile & Northern ⅞; Peoria & Eastern 2⅞, and Missouri Pacific ½.

Tire company stocks were fairly active, particularly one or two of the low-priced ones. Norwalk and Ajax made made quite a stir in the first hour or so. Both were "tipped" to move, just as United States Rubber was a few days ago.

Another small advance in sterling and a brisk rally in lire in London resulting in a climb here of 5 points, featured foreign exchange dealings. Argentine exchange was strong.

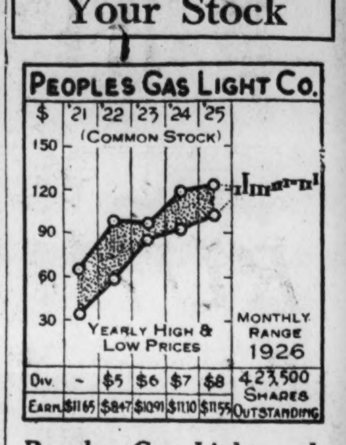
What's Behind Your Stock



Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company

The Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co. practically monopolizes the gas business of Chicago. In all a population of 2,800,000 is served by plants which have a capacity for producing approximately 150,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

This company, which was incorporated in 1855, had an excellent earnings record until 1917, when, because of abnormal costs due to war conditions and inability to obtain satisfactory rate adjustments, operations resulted in a deficit. The unsatisfactory conditions continued for several years, but in 1921 earnings again returned to a normal basis. During the five years which ended in December, 1925, the company's net income averaged about $4,200,000 annually and earnings on the capital stock varied from 8.47 per cent in 1922 to a record figure of 11.55 per cent in 1925. Earnings for 1926, when final figures are in, will probably show a slightly higher rate of return than that of the year before.

At the end of June, 1926, the company had a working capital of $6,535,975. Bank loans were $100,000 smaller than at the end of 1925 and amounted to $388,333. The company has a good-sized funded debt which totals slightly over $77,000,000.

Dividends on the capital stock were paid regularly from 1894 to 1917. They were passed, however, in the years 1918 to 1921, inclusive, but were resumed in 1922 since when the rate of payment has gradually been increased to 8 per cent per year, the same rate as that effective in 1914 and 1915.

RUTH THREATENS TO QUIT IF DENIED SALARY BOOST

Babe's Contract Isn't Only Financial Issue in Baseball

Eddie Roush and Herb Pennock Also Figuring in Dealings in Players' Stock on New York Exchange.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Babe Ruth's 1927 contract isn't the only financial issue now on New York's baseball horizon. Eddie Roush, outfield star acquired by the Giants from the Reds in exchange for George Kelly, and Herb Pennock, willowy southpaw ace of the Yankees, also figured in today's dealings in player stock.

The Giants, 24 hours after closing the Roush-Kelly transaction, announced they had mailed the outfielder a three-year contract, understood to call for $19,000 a year, the same amount he received from the Reds during the past three seasons. Since this was what Roush was reported as demanding from Cincinnati, the Giants expect him to sign without delay.

Pennock, who announced several days ago he was a holdout, came over from his Philadelphia home for a conference with Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees. He departed with a new salary proposal under advisement and informd Huggins he would give his answer in a day or two.

Mt. St. Mary's Doubts Eligibility of Players

The Mount St. Mary's basketball team will not play its annual games with the Washington College five, claiming the team is playing ineligible men. Carroll and Dumschott are the questionable players.

According to a critic on a Baltimore paper Carroll and Dumschott are playing their sixth season with Washington College.

Red Barron Refuses Offer From Braves

Atlanta, Ga. Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—David I. (Red) Barron, former Georgia Tech baseball and football star, announced tonight that he had returned unsigned a contract to play with the Boston Braves this season because the salary offer was too low.

Close friends expressed the belief that he would not leave his present job as teacher-coach at Monroe A. and M. college to play professional baseball.

Mary Browne Faces Ban In Golf

U.S.G.A. to Class Tennis Star as "Pro," Is Indication.

May Say Her Status Is Detrimental to Game.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Mary K. Browne, who joined C. C. Pyles' professional tennis troupe, will be classified as a golf professional at the annual meeting of the United States Golf association in April, it was learned on reliable authority today.

The basis for this action will be, according to officials of the association, that Miss Browne's tennis professionalism reflects adversely upon amateur golf. Although there is no provision in the by-laws of the U. S. G. A. which automatically brands an amateur in any other sport as a professional in golf, the association will rule Miss Browne ineligible to take part in any amateur tournament directly under its auspices because it believes the public might suspect her of accepting remuneration for her activity with mashie and niblick or traveling expenses as she does on the courts.

This decision, of course, will exclude the world's most versatile woman athlete from the women's national golf championship at Cherry Valley, September 19 to 24. The primary purpose of her request for a ruling on her status was to determine whether she was eligible for that event.

The grounds upon which Miss Browne will be classed as a professional golfer is the following U. S. G. A. regulation: "The U. S. G. A. executive committee shall have the right of declaring ineligible to compete in any amateur tournament under its jurisdiction any amateur who, in its opinion, has received any consideration because of his skill at the game or who has acted in a manner detrimental to the best interests or to the spirit of the game."

The association believes Miss Browne's case is covered by the last clause of this ruling. The executive committee interprets her competition as a professional in tennis as detrimental to the best interests of golf.

Another U. S. G. A. regulation forbids amateur players, except members of the Walker cup team, to accept traveling expenses. As there is no unit in the women's division of the game to correspond with the Walker cup team, this regulation means as applied to women that every woman golfer must travel at her own expense.

The association feels that inasmuch as Miss Browne undoubtedly would take part in professional tennis matches and would accept traveling expenses to the place in which they were held during the golf season, she would violate this regulation.

"Fore," Shouts Law As Golfers Duel With Midirons at 50 Yards

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—The story of a duel at 50 yards with golf clubs and balls came out of Howey-in-the-Hills, near here, today.

E. W. Willson, of St. Louis, and T. V. McQuain, of Syracust, N. Y., disagreed as to the number of strokes each took in negotiating the Dubsdread course. They had words, then an argument and finally a fight. It was agreed that each was to have one driver, one iron and two dozen balls. At 50 paces tees were carefully prepared. At the drop of a hat firing started. Several shots were high and wide and then one duelist knocked his antagonist down with a line shot to the shin.

He couldn't keep his eye on the ball, however, and before he could get the range his opponent was up at him with an iron. He evened honors in three shots by sending a fast one to the other's ribs.

Passersby, attracted by what at first appeared to be a spirited practice session, becamed alarmed. Constable E. C. Scott was called. He arrived just as the iron shots began to whistle.

"Fore" shouted the constable. The duelists paused, one with a limping stance, and the other bowed as if for a putt. Scott approached the couple, pistol at the ready, and seized their weapons.

An amicable settlement was effected.

Three stars of the Reds, Hugh Critz, second baseman; Wallie Pipp, first sacker, and Eugene Hargrave, catcher, still are outside the fort. They are holding out for substantial increases in salary. Hargrave was considered the leading batter in the National league last season, while Critz was voted by baseball writers as the second most valuable player to his club.

A. A. U. Card for Hoff Is Asked on Coast

Los Angeles, Feb. 10 (By A. P.)—The Los Angeles Athletic club has applied to the district registration committee of the Amateur Athletic union for a card for Charles Hoff, Norwegian vault champion.

In disclosing today that this action had been taken, officials of the club refused to make any comment on whether this was an indication that Hoff's amateur standing may be restored.

Hoff was suspended from further competition in the United States last year while making an American tour. Later he appeared in a vaudeville vaulting and dance act. In a suit against the A. A. U. he charges he was forced to professionalize himself when expense money was withheld by the sport organization.

Western Five Wins in Final 10 Seconds

Walker's Field Goal Defeats Gonzaga, 33 to 32.

Lead See-saws With Winners in Van at Half, 20-12.

By ORREL MITCHELL.

A NEAT toss through the net after a fast dribble to the rim by Capt. George Walker in the last ten seconds of play brought a well-earned victory to the Western High basketers over the Gonzaga five in a 33-to-32 game yesterday afternoon at the Western High school gymnasium.

The fray was replete with thrills and sparkled with brilliant shooting. Both quintets concentrated on the defense at the start and there was little scoring, the Eye Streeters leading by a 5-to-3 margin at the end of the first quarter. Gonzaga increased its advantage to 10 to 3, but the West End dribblers then launched an attack that literally swept the purple-clad boys off their feet, overhauling their rivals and going into the van by a 20-to-12 count at half time.

The Gonzaga lads came back even stronger with the resumption of hostilities and in turn unleashed a scoring offensive in which Farrell and Bozek were the central figures, that put them on even terms with Coach Ahearn's charges and found them holding a 26-to-24 lead at the conclusion of the third quarter.

The final quarter was an exciting nip-and-tuck battle with the Eye streeters in front by a scant point until Walker snatched the game out of the fire with his deciding two-pointer.

The loss of Patty Byrne as the result of personal foul materially weakened the Gonzaga combination and undoubtedly his absence during the major part of the contest had much to do with his team's defeat.

Coombs and Wilson, because of their brilliant shooting and all-around floor work, are entitled to a share of Western's laurels, while Garber, Buscher and Rabbit also performed creditable.

Capt. Bozek and "Tubba" Farrell were the outstanding performers in the play of the visitors. The "Phantom" displayed some clever dribbling and led his team in the scoring with five two-pointers and a trio of foul tosses from the foul line.

Farrell executed some of the most brilliant shooting ever witnessed in the Western gym, looping in three beautiful shots from past midcourt at crititcal stages of the fray.

WALSH LEADS GOLFERS AT SPRINGS

Goslin Picks Up Ball, Yielding to Cold; Rice Continues.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Frank Walsh, professional of the Butte des Mortes country club, Appleton, Wis., darkhorsed his way into the lead in the South Central open golf tournament here today when he finished the first half of the two days' play with a low score of 148 in 36 holes.

Turning in a pair of 74s, Walsh nosed out six veteran pros who were bunched in second place, each scoring 150. These were Jack Forrester, of the Baltusrol club, Short, N. J., John Golden, North Jersey club, Paterson, N. J.; Cyril Walker, unattached; Al Watrous, Highland club, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Bill Creavy, Bonnie Bush club, Larchmont, N. Y., and Bill Mehlhorn, Los Angeles, present South Central title holder.

Joe Kirkwood, trick shot exponent, Joe Turnesa, Fairview club, Elmsford, N. Y., Bobby Cruickshank, who recently won the California and Texas open tournaments, were close behind with 151 each.

John W. Dawson, Glen Oaks Country club, Chicago, led the small number of amateurs with a medal tally of 154, which he scored by matching a 77 of the morning round by consistent afternoon play.

Cold weather and wet fairways which were pounded by heavy rains last night, handicapped the players and interfered with low scoring.

The baseball stars in the competition showed up not so well today when the pros left them to their own resources. Leon "Goose" Goslin and Sam Rice, Washington outfielders, were the only members of the group who started today. Goslin played a few holes through the wintry blast then pocketed his ball. "Too cold" he said and went in to the clubhouse fire.

Rice battled the bunkers and the weather through the 36 holes, and chalked up 87 and 84.

Accounting P. O. Five Wins by Single Point

The General Accounting Office basketball team eked out a one-point victory over the Second Assistants in the Postoffice league last night, 28 to 27, mainly through the efforts of Clark, whose four field goals almost earned him the high scoring honors.

Five field goals by Povich, of the defeated team, kept the losers in the running throughout.

Business Life Beckons to Bambino

Declares He'll Start Chain of Gyms and Teach Game.

Has Plan to Initiate Baseball Correspondence Course.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Rather than accept $52,000 for playing baseball in 1927, Babe Ruth announced today he will enter the business world by opening a string of gymnasiums and starting a correspondence course on how to keep fit physically and how to play baseball.

Ruth would have as his partner Arthur A. McGovern, of New York, a well-known physical instructor.

Financially and physically it is a new George Herman Ruth who is asking Col. Jacob Ruppert, of the New York Yankees for a salary increase.

This morning Ruth, as he went out on the road for an hour's walking and jogging, weighed exactly 229¾ pounds. His trainers say that another seven pounds off that weight would be plenty to put him in the very pink of condition.

The king of swat gets up early, shortly before 6 a. m., and goes to bed before 11 p. m. He does his road work, runs around the bases in the motion picture he is making in a Burbank studio, plays hand ball and tennis, bats out home runs by the hour at Wrigley field for exercise and the entertainment of guests and drops onto his mattress early every night healthily tired for a sound sleep.

Since the close of the world's series he has been busy in vaudeville and on the road, always taking exercise and always busy—too busy to spend money. The result financially is a bank account of generous proportions.

So with money at his back and a waistline no longer a threat, the Babe is feeling independent, so independent that he made the announcement of his proposed string of gymnasiums.

Ruth denied reports that he is asking a salary of $100,000 a year from the Yankees. An unsigned contract returned to the club officials will be his only indication for the time being that the offered terms are not satisfactory. He has made no specific salary demand, he said.

Yankee Owners Certain Of Signing Babe Ruth

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Officials of the New York Yankees, including Col. Jacob Ruppert, Secretary Ed Barrow and Manager Miller Huggins, observed a diplomatic reticence for the most part today with regard to Babe Ruth's 1927 contract, but indicated, nevertheless, that they are con-

BADENOCH OUTRUNS FIELD IN HANDICAP AT MIAMI

Romp Defeats Pani Roma In Opener

Nama Wins Eased Up, Running Field in Second Dizzy.

Fairy Maiden, Ridden by Callahan, Scores in Fourth Race.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—E. S. Luther's Badenoch, well played, scored an easy victory in winning the Stuart handicap, feature of the program, today. H. S. Jobe's Grippeminaud was second, and Sunny Land stables' Little Asbestos third.

Little Asbestos, displaying early speed, surprised the talent by taking a long lead around the paddock turn. He set a fast pace, but it began to tell on him, and he shortened his stride in the last half-mile. Badenoch was the runner-up all the way, but dashed to the front in the stretch and, increasing his advantage to the wire, won by three lengths. Grippeminaud beat Little Asbestos half a length for the place.

G. W. Hurst's Romp, fresh from victories at Tampa, made good at the first asking when he romped away with the purse in the opening event, stepping the six furlongs in the fast time of 1:12.

He carried 120 pounds, followed the pace to the stretch, where he rushed to the front, and won nicely in hand by two lengths. Pani Roma came from far back to outgame Blue Granite for the place. The favorite, Dry Moon, was fourth.

G. W. Hurst's colors were carried to victory in the second event when Nama galloped home many lengths in advance of the field. It made the second straight score of the day for the stable as Romp won the first race.

Nama, despite the fact that she is purely a sprinter, was heavily wagered on and she ran just as the betting indicated. She dashed away to a long lead and had the field dizzy trying to keep up. She won, eased up, by ten lengths. Grayling's Lady was second by a length over Osman.

True Pal, H. T. Archibald's good colt, won the 2-year-old event by three lengths and ran the three furlongs in 35 4-5. Partake landed second money, and Miss Fire was third. The field got away to a good start and True Pal was rushed right to the front. He led all the way and won by three lengths. Partake beat Miss Fire a like distance for the place.

The Salubria stables Fairy Maiden, with the veteran Johnny Callahan in saddle, proved a real good thing when she galloped home lengths in advance of her field in the fourth race. She paid $9.90. Handy's Bend jumped away to the lead, while Fairy Maiden was next to last going around the paddock turn.

At the far turn Callahan rushed her to the front. She made up ten lengths in a furlong and taking command won, eased up by six lengths. Handy's Ben defeated Montclair a head for the place.

Over a track that was slightly dampened by a light rain which fell just before the horses went to the post in the sixth race, Adamas, well played, was an easy winner. He never left the issue in doubt after the break. Fields, who had the mount, rushed him into a long lead and he made every post a winning one. Adamas won by five lengths. Hobcaw was an easy second, with Patuxent third a length back. Don Quixote, the odds-on favorite, finished a poor fourth.

Overdraft, displaying his New Orleans speed, won the last race in a romp by four lengths, with Sonny second and Hijo third.

Baltimore Five Plays Yanks Here Sunday

The Washington Yankees, who have yet to be defeated this season, will entertain the Montgomery-Ward five, of Baltimore, in the Gonzaga gymnasium Sunday afternoon. The visitors will present a formidable aggregation that holds victories over the top-notch independent teams of Maryland. In the Baltimore Industrial league the Montgomery-Ward five is in the thick of the fight for first-place honors and is favored by many to cop the title.

In the preliminary game, which will get under way at 2:30, the Roses are slated to face the Palace Athletic Club dribblers, the pride of Southwest Washington.

Tates Will Sponsor Midgets and Juniors

The Tates, who ranked among the leaders in their class last year, will foster two nines this season. They plan to organize a midget team in addition to their regular junior club. All veterans of last year's aggregation are requested to report today at Twelfth and C streets northeast, along with any other candidates who wish to try out for the club.

GOSLINS TO MEET.

The Goose Goslins, last season's champions, will organize for the coming season and play in the senior ranks. All of last year's players are requested to report at a meeting to be held at the home of Vic Gauzza, Monday night.

Major League Stars of 1926

National League

ALL-STAR NATIONAL LEAGUE TEAM OF 1926.

ALL-STAR teams of baseball celebrities have long been a popular fad. Such teams are usually selected by the individual with little effort to guard against personal prejudice and natural bias. In consequence, they usually express nothing beyond the opinions of a single fallible observer.

More ambitious selections are sometimes made by groups of ball players or committees of newspaper writers. These selections are more accurate, but even they leave much to be desired. They are generally made before the complete records are available and are based too much upon mere observation, too little upon permanent statistics.

In the series of brief sketches that have gone before we have tried to select the leading player at each position, according to the unbiased evidence of the records. Besides, we have called upon a wide variety of statistics in order to gain a comprehensive view of a player's all-round ability based upon no fewer than ten selected points, and in summing up, we have allowed a fair value to each event.

Moreover, where the issue is closely drawn, we have not been guided entirely by arbitrary figures but have made considerable allowance for those intangible elements which go to make up player greatness, such as experience, aggressiveness and the like.

Surely the records themselves are more impartial witnesses than any fan or player or writer. We may safely leave to these records, properly interpreted, the true all-star National league team of 1926.

According to our point system the perfect player would have a total of 30 credit points, for he would excel his fellows in all ten of the events selected. As each first choice, according to our system, counts 3 points, his first ten choices would give him a total of 30 points. Needless to say, no such player exists in either league.

It is, however, rather interesting to draw up a team of selected players and see how they rank in credit points. Those who rank highest are least assailable. Those who have relatively low rating have encountered severe competition.

A glance at the accompanying table will give the all-star team of the National league as selected by the records. At first base Walter Pipps has 19 points. At second we find Hugh Critz with 18. At third base Lester Bell leads with 21. At shortstop Glen Wright with 11, the competition is unusually keen at short.

In the outfield Hazen Cuyler has a clear lead with 13 points His associates, Lee Douthit, with 8, and Paul Waner, with 7 points, illustrate how finely drawn is the margin between stardom and mediocrity. Among National league catchers, O'Farrell comes to the fore with 20 points. Donohue leads the pitchers with 12. Kremer with 9 points, Mays and Root with 8 each round out a balanced pitching staff.

This team, as selected, will doubtless prove a target for much criticism. Some of its members are not more brilliant than other players at the position, but the ten-point system which has guided us in this selection makes due allowance for quantity of work as well as quality and gives a player who took part in 150 games a deserved choice over a player who took part in, say, 120.

After all, service performed upon the field is the thing which wins pennants. A .250 hitter in action is much more valuable than a .300 hitter on the bench. In any case, according to the evidence of the records, the players selected were, on the whole, the most efficient representatives in the National league at their respective positions in the season of 1926.

MD. YEARLING FIVE MEETS STENOGS

Devitt at Georgetown Prep in Only Other School Game.

COACH COLLINS' Business High basketers will journey to College Park this afternoon to encounter the speedy Maryland Freshman aggregation in the Ritchie gymnasium at 3:30 o'clock.

Judging by the recent form the Yearlings have shown, the Stenographers will have a huge task before them and must display some clever basketball if they wish to come through with flying colors. The rather decisive win of the Old Line Freshmen over Devitt indicates they have a high-scoring offensive which is hard to check once it has launched its attack.

Devitt is the only other scholastic five slated to see action today. Coach Kopf will take his warriors to Garrett Park to meet the Georgetown Prep lads on the latter's home court. The visitors are favored to win.

The Devitt tossers lost the decision to the Maryland Freshmen a few days ago, while the Georgetown Prep lads were turned back by the Business courtmen, and both quintets will be anxious to restore their names to the winning column. If the Garrett Park boys can successfully cover Barklow, Devitt's scoring threat, their chances of winning will be considerably increased.

The Friends School 135-pound dribblers are booked for a visit to Alexandria to meet Episcopal's 135pounders in a Junior Prep league contest.

Utah Horse Racing Law Repeal Voted

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Repeal of the Redd racing law, enacted in 1925, was approved today by the lower house of the Utah legislature.

Favorable action is expected in the senate and Gov. George H. Dern is said to be ready to sign the repeal measure, which was introduced by the author of the present racing law.

Opponents of the sport argued in the house that horse racing and gambling are practically synonymous, hence it was necessary to outlaw racing. Pari-mutuel betting machines are permitted under the 1925 law.

$25,000 to Be Prize For Chicago Derby

Chicago, Feb. 10 (By A. P.)—Sentiment will be played against cold at Washington park this year, Robert M. Sweitzer, president and general manager of the Illinois Jockey club, said today, when he announced that the American derby will hang up a prize of only $25,0 . .nis year.

He explained that the $100,000 race last year attracted only a mediocre field. He hopes that the glory of winning an American derby will again overshadow its monetary value.

DIXIE FROWNS ON SPRING GAME

Rule Banning Gridiron Play Out of Season Is Pointed Out.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the Southern conference, today threw a wet blanket over proposed spring football games in a statement which declared that it was unconstitutional for member institutions to play such games.

"As the constitution of the Southern conference clearly states the opening and closing dates for football games, it is unconstitutional for conference institutions to play football during the spring practice or at any other time than that stated in the constitution," Dr. Sanford said in a formal statement.

"The executive committee of the conference meets in Atlanta on Friday and Saturday, February 25 and 26, and at that time any conference institution may appeal from the decision made by the president.

"A word of explanation is necessary. At the close of spring practice last year Georgia played Oglethorpe in a benefit game. I realized it was contrary to the spirit and letter of the constitution to play that game and that it was a mistake.

"I do not regret, however, playing it, and am positive that the executive committee would have granted gladly the request to play such a game. A former student was desperately ill and needed help. The proceeds of the game were sent to him with the hope that he might be restored to health. But that hope was in vain. No football game ever was played with a purer motive and it never was intended for this game to set a precedent for spring football games."

The Georgia-Oglethorpe game was the first such game played in the country and attracted attention everywhere and many teams have indicated that similar games will be played this spring during or at the end of the spring training season.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT E. COLLYER

HELEN'S BABE.

Mr. Headley is on the ground to see his $50,000 New Orleans handicap entry perform at New Orleans today, and she will be out to win. Stepped a mile in 1:42 the other morning with her mouth wide open. Fourth race is the spot and don't muff it. HUNTSMAN'S last effort was a good one and needs only to repeat to take the place from SUPERFRANK.

Bedwell will crown another maiden—FAIR LARK—in the opener. AROMATIC has been a consistent place horse, and that's where he probably will land again.

JUANITA looks like a kick in the slats in the second, with PURE DEE the runner-up.

FIRE DOG, a Kelly nag that ran a poor race when an odds-on favorite the other day, is due to turn a flip-flop in the third. RED LEATHER and STINTSON for what is left.

BRIGHT SHAWL is the sweet patootie in the fifth. McCOMAS appears to be the dangerous one here.

GENIAL HOST has shown the best speed of the platers in the sixth and has a shade the best of the weights. PALMIST'S recent races give him an outside chance to spill the beans.

JUGGLER is the standout at Miami on his good second to Catalan in last Saturday's big race. Goes in the fifth spasm.

Old Boy Koerner has GORGET ready to slam over in the first event. This one has been working extra well. MUNGO and THE ROVE hold the balance safe.

OWENA appears to be the class of the youngsters in the second.

APPLECROSS is worth stringing with in the third. Hasn't much to go with him today.

GARETH is the clocker's special in the fourth. Believe this one to be a pretty sort of a hide.

CLOISTER is in a nice spot in the seventh and is in good hands.

More anon.

GEORGETOWN BOXERS PICKED FOR NAVY MATCH

Welter Class Performer In Doubt

Murphy and Malone in Draw in Trial for Bouts Tomorrow.

Haggerty Faces Test in Collins, Navy's Bantam Champ.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY makes another athletic invasion of the Annapolis stronghold of the United States Naval academy tomorrow. This time the competitive sport at hand will be boxing, at which Navy athletes long have been proficient.

The matches will mark the debut of the first boxing team ever to represent the Hilltop, coached by A. D. Calhoun, who represented Navy in the featherweight class in the 1924 intercollegiates.

The Hilltop coach yesterday held a series of elimination bouts, culminating some three weeks of intensive training, to determine which athletes will be the first to don the gloves for Georgetown.

With the exception of the welterweight class, Coach Calhoun has decided on his entries. The position in question lies between Murphy and Malone. This pair fought the regulation distance of three rounds yesterday to a draw and followed with an extra session equally as close. Both will make the trip, the coach withholding his choice until just before the bout.

Those who won position and their classes follow: Bantam—Emmett Haggerty; featherweight, Ray Abbaticchio; lightweight, Joe Davis; middleweight, Joe Preece; light-heavyweight, Joe Preece; weight, Stockton.

While Georgetown can hardly be expected to win the team match, Hilltop followers will be disappointed if two of their boxers do not get the nod of the officials. This is particularly true of Joe Preece, the middleweight, who has shown exceptional form considering that, like the others, his boxing past has been confined to the three weeks the team has been training.

Emmett Haggerty, in the bantam class, is looked upon as one of the best performers on the squad, but he faces a mountainous task tomorrow, being called on to face Richard Collins, Navy's intercollegiate champion of last year. Both Davis and Abbaticchio have shown good form against the heavier boxers.

A cross-country hike today will complete the preparation of the boxers.

A match with Syracuse in the latter's gymnasium has been scheduled for next Saturday, it was announced yesterday.

CLUB IS CONFIDENT BAMBINO WILL SIGN

fident the big hitter will swing his fountain pen on the dotted line within the next month.

The Babe's threat to retire if his demands are not met isn't worrying the club, Barrow said. Col. Ruppert smiled at the notion of Ruth quitting the game, especially with the success of a motion picture venture depending on the frequency with which his name gets into the baseball headlines this season. Huggins expressed the opinion that any differences over salary would be straightened out on Ruth's return to the East.

The Yankees, baseball men believe, are ready to increase the Babe's salary substantially beyond the figure of $52,000 in the contract which expired with the 1926 season. They point out that the renewal of the old terms, which he has rejected, served merely as a gesture to conform to baseball law that requires the players to have the document in their hands by February 15, and not intended as a final offer.

When Ruth comes back East after finishing his picture work, about February 25, he is expected to get down to brass tacks on the salary issue and reach an agreement with Col. Ruppert.

A compromise at around $75,000 is regarded as more likely.

Babe Ruth Now an Industry And Has Acquired Manager

His Feelings Hurt by Paltry Offer of $52,000 and Christy Walsh Takes Steps to Demonstrate It to Ruppert.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The management of the New York Yankees today took pains to explain that there was no intention of insulting Babe Ruth when a contract was sent to him recently offering him $52,000 a year.

Mr. Jake Ruppert, the chief proprietor of the firm, admits that Mr. Ruth is one of those persons whose feelings may be hurt by an offer of $52,000 a year and he trusts that the Babe will comprehend that this figure was mentioned only as a formality, almost as a jest.

It appears that under the laws of the baseball industry, the various firms are required to send contracts to the athletes under their management not later than February 15, failing which they lose title to the same and the players become free agents, at liberty to solicit employment where they wish.

The contracts for the Yankees, great and otherwise, were mailed well within the time limit and inasmuch as Ruth was in California, giving the tongue-tied muse of the movies a vigorous workout, there was no opportunity to debate the delicate matter of wages with him.

In these circumstances, Mr. Barrow, the business manager, tactlessly inserted the figures $52,000 in the blank where the salary is stated and the Babe on perusing the document became annoyed. The management of the firm explains, however, that for the purposes of this formality the Babe might have been offered $500 for the season.

It will be worth remembering that Ruth now has a manager, press agent and amanuensis, Mr. Christy Walsh, who appreciates the importance of the printed word. For several years, the Babe was his own manager if his conduct of his affairs could be called management, and during that time he was seldom in funds and frequently in hock or thereabouts.

Furthermore, he was rude to people to whom he should have been polite, he neglected his by-products, such as literature and dramatic work and generally speaking he was a run-down concern.

Mr. Walsh is a man who specializes in marketing the letters of persons who are known in journalism as the sweaty literati, including ball players, intellectual prize fighters and tennis players, with the divine gift of prose, and he recognized not only the literary genius of the Babe but his potentialities as a money making institution in other lines.

If prize fighters could fight once in two years and thrive by other arts in the meantime, the Babe was neglecting a great opportunity, so Mr. Walsh organized him as an industry. Thus, during the last game of the last world series when the customers were still mindful of the Babe's three homers in one game at St. Louis and his general indispensability to the Yanks and the major leagues at large, a rumor circulated through the press box that the Babe would demand $150,000 for the season of 1927.

And in view of the number of customers that Ruth had attracted to all the ballyards of the American league in eight years of enormous effort, the figure did not sound as outlandish as Mr. Walsh had expected when he set it in circulation. Intending, like a lawyer, to sue for a lot and compromise on plenty, Mr. Walsh's imagination balked at $200,000, and the most he had the audacity to name was a figure that did not seem audacious at all.

Since then Mr. Walsh has closely attended the Babe, having him photographed in football costume, in tennis finery and in swimming, and the pictures somehow have found their way to the desks of the rotogravure editors.

He sent all the way to New York for a little abandoned prize fighter named Artie McGovern, who rubbed the Babe and played handball with him last winter, and Artie went across the continent to train Babe Ruth in California, where a 50-cent ad in the papers would have brought enough muscle-thumpers to rub the entire cast of a world war, nor was his departure clandestine nor his mission secret.

So, henceforth, if the Babe frowns publicly and announces that he will quit baseball unless his terms are met, be it understood that he is under management at last and that disputes over money, far from disgusting the customers, are sources of great publicity, provided the money is large enough.

But the management of the Yankees firm undoubtedly has been subjected to serious embarrassment in its dealings with Babe Ruth by the recklessness of the Washington and Philadelphia firms in their dealings with Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb. Speaker is reported to have signed for about $50,000 a year and Cobb's wages for 1927 are stated as $75,000. Those are large amounts even if the aged athletes in question don't receive them, and Jake Ruppert, who had hoped to appease Ruth with $75,000 and a one-year contract will now find the Babe demanding substantial recognition of his preeminence.

PAGES CLASH ON COURT TONIGHT

Vice President Dawes and Other Notables to Witness Game.

LEADERS in both houses of Congress, rushing to the support of their respective sides, will be out in force tonight when the Senate Pages' basketball team meets that of the House of Representative Pages for the championship of Capitol Hill. The big game will be in the ballroom of the City club, 1320 G street northwest, starting at 8 o'clock.

With boxes already reserved for the parties of Vice President Dawes, head of the Senate, and Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House, the floor leaders on both sides have promised to act in similar capacities in the cheering sections on the floor.

Senator David Walsh, sponsor of the Senate five, will actively urge his proteges on and Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, is to do likewise for the House errand boys. The entire Indiana delegation in the House, already certain of victory, will be on hand to see it.

The game itself, with two well-coached, close-guarding fives of youngsters in the points, is expected to be an extremely close and low-scoring contest. The teams could not be more evenly matched, and, with the 1927 championship of Capitol Hill at stake, it is certain both sides will put forth their best efforts.

Dancing is to follow the game and, with most of the solons present taking part, the affair should be a congressional get-together.

The House pages ran through a strenuous practice session against the Crescent city five at Central High school last night, and will choose their opening lineup from Clark, Markel, Ellsworth, Meade, Richey, White, Miller and Sprankle.

Outside of the fact Hoy, Alexander and McDaniels are sure to start for the Senate, little is known of that five's makeup.

Boxing, Wrestling Head Navy Program

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10.—Boxing bouts with Georgetown and wrestling matches with the national champions of Oklahoma A. and M. college are the headliners on the program of athletics to be presented by the Annapolis Midshipmen on Saturday.

There will be seven other contests on the side, varsity teams participating in four and plebes in three. All except the Georgetown bouts will be staged in the afternoon, they being reserved for the evening entertainment.

The varsity basketball attraction will be with Gettysburg college. The plebes will put on their annual swimming contest with the natators of Central High, of Washington, and their other engagements will be basketball against New York Military Academy, of Cornwall-on-Hudson, and fencing against the bladesmen of Forest Park High school, of Baltimore.

Kaplan Has Influenza; McLarnin Bout Off

San Francisco, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Plans for a ten-round open-air bout here February 22 between Louis ("Kid") Kaplan, former featherweight champion, and Jimmy McLarnin, of Vancouver, B. C., were shattered today when word was received that Kaplan had been taken ill with influenza.

Billy Gibson, manager of Kaplan, telegraphed Promoter Ancil Hoffman from New York that his boxer was a "very sick boy" and had been ordered to bed. Gibson said a match at Madison Square Garden, March 14, also would have to be canceled.

Standards Outclass Smithfield Quintet

The Standards completely outclassed the Smithfield quintet in the Boys' Club Senior league last night, and with Jones accounting for eight field goals registered a 54-11 victory. Ferguson and Levine each contributed five goals from scrimmage for the Standards.

The Senators will oppose the Washington Midgets at 7:15 o'clock and the Celtics will meet Montrose at 8:30 in tomorrow night's league games.

A double bill has been arranged for Boys' club teams February 19 when the Celtics play the Richmond Boys' club and the Flashes meet the Reliance team, of Baltimore, South Atlantic champions. Both games will be played at the Boys' Club gymnasium. Dancing will follow the games.

DAY'S NEW OFFERINGS FEATURE BOND MARKET

Prices of Listed Issues Drift Aimlessly as Demand Falls Off.

FOREIGN LOANS ARE SOFT

New York, Feb. 10 (By the Associated Press).—New issues totaling almost $75,000,000 today turned the attention of buyers away from the listed bond market, in which prices drifted aimlessly. The falling off in demand, however, was partly attributed to the disturbance brought about by recent hectic conditions in the stock market. Bond dealers were inclined to mark time until they were able to recover their bearings. Sales fell below $12,000,000, the smallest total in any full day's session this year.

Maintenance by the Bank of England of its 5 per cent rate and a heavy calling of brokers' loans temporarily chilled enthusiasm for high grade investment issues. Expectations of a reduction in the Federal Reserve Bank rediscount rate today were abandoned as soon as the London report was received.

Secondary rail mortgages displayed a moderate revival of strength after several days of intermittent declines. Advances, however, were of a fractional nature.

Little activity took place in the industrial and utilities divisions. Selling pressure against Empire Gas & Fuel issues and Fort Smith Light 5s caused material losses.

Demand for Liberty bonds, heavy in the earlier hours, dropped off later and government obligations became irregular.

Further recessions featured the foreign group, although a few Central European liens, and one or two French issues were fairly well supported.

Prompt sale was reported of the $40,000,000 Associated Gas & Electric Co.'s issue, the $20,572,000 Chicago & Northwestern gold bonds, and the $7,500,000 offering for the International Railways of Central America. It is now reported that the Southern Pacific's new issue will amount to $35,000,000, to be offered about March 31.

YOUR INCOME TAX

No. 26.

Amounts paid or accrued within the taxable year 1926 as interest on indebtedness are deductible, with certain exceptions, from gross income in determining net income. Such items include interest on money borrowed to defray personal expenses and money borrowed for the purchase of real estate. If a person owes money secured by a lien or mortgage on his home, the amount of interest paid on such indebtedness may be deducted. However, interest need not be evidenced by a lien, judgment, or mortgage to make the interest thereon deductible. Frequently, indebtedness is evidenced only by notes without additional security.

Interest paid on behalf of a friend or relative where there is no legal obligation on the part of the payer can not be deducted. In such cases the payment amounts to a loan or gift.

Since interest may be deducted, it follows that interest received is subject to the income tax. Interest need not be received in cash, but is constructively received when credited and held subject to call. For example, interest credited to a taxpayer's savings account for the year 1926 is income for that year.

WALL STREET NEWS BRIEFS

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Wall street hears the forthcoming report of the U. S. Rubber Co. for 1926 will show net profits of about $8,500,000 which would be brought to $13,500,000 by a payment of $5,000,000 from a subsidiary, the U. S. Rubber Plantations, Inc. This would be better than $10 a share on the common stock, after preferred dividends, against $14.91 a share in 1925, without earnings of the plantation subsidiary.

January sales of Victor Talking Machine Co. were $3,672,000. In January, 1926, when production difficulties curtailed sales, the total was $1,977,000.

Orders placed for structural steel in the last week dropped to 25,000 tons from 55,000 tons the week before. Pending inquiries aggregate 43,000 tons.

Fanny Farmer Candy Shops earned $2.95 a share on the common in 1926 against $1.76 in 1925. Net income rose to $367,701 from $242,319.

January building permits in 470 cities compiled by S. W. Straus & Co. show a drop of 12 per cent compared with January, 1926, and 29 per cent below December.

Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York made no change today in its rediscount rate of 4 per cent. A reduction has been anticipated for several weeks.

Average increase of about 15 per cent in Chain Stores sales during 1926 represents the largest expansion of any form of retail trade for the year, and is a logical development of modern merchandising, says review by Dominick & Dominick, stock exchange members.

January sales of Southern Dairies, Inc., rose to $675,482 from $621,415 in January, 1925.

The Texas Corporation has reduced the posted price of Markham, Tex. crude oil 25 cents a barrel to $1.45. This grade formerly was classified as gulf coast heavy crude oil.

Freight traffic on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific picked up in the first seven days of February, loading of 34,561 cars comparing with 31,946 a year ago.

Alfred O. Corbin, partner in the investing banking firm of F. J. Lisman & Co., today was elected president of the First Federal Foreign Investment Trust.

The annual report of the Venezuelan Petroleum Co., of Delaware for 1926 shows income of $40,199 and expenses of $43,503, leaving net loss of $3,304.

Fox Film Corporation has completed a construction program involving $1,000,000 during the last year at the studios in Hollywood and Fox Hills, Calif., including three new stages, each 150 by 350 feet, said to be the largest in the United States.

Edsel Ford was quoted in dispatches from Detroit denying reports that he had acquired or was seeking control of Hudson Motor Car Co. The rumor has persisted, he said, until in some quarters sheer repetition has given it a status of fact and for this reason he again made formal denial.

Directors of Eastman Kodak Co. declared the usual quartely extra dividend of 75 cents a share on the common, and the regular quarterly of $1.25.

CURB MARKET REVIEW.

New York, Feb. 10 (By the Associated Press).—Renewed activity and strength of the petroleum issues, particularly the high grade shares, was again the feature of today's curb market. Large earnings, heavy consumption of gasoline and recent gasoline price advances furnished the background for the advance.

Imperial of Canada moved up over a point to a new high at 44¾, and International Petroleum, Ohio Oil and Illinois Pipe Line also sold a point or so higher. Creole Syndicate was again active around its recent high level, but some of the other South American issues lost ground.

Rand Kardex common was heavily sold in the belief that the good news had been discounted by the recent merger announcement, the stock closing 3 points lower at 67. Remington Noiseless Typewriter held firm. Massey-Harris jumped 10 points to 92 and then forfeited half its gain on the denial of reports that the International Harvester was seeking control. Sherwin Williams moved up 3 points to another new high at 49 and Central Leather preferred (when issued) touched a new top at 82. Tubize Art Silk advanced over 5 points, but the other artificial silk shares were heavy.

Radio shares were mixed, with De Forest touching a new low. Warner Pictures B also was in supply. A 5-point jump in Auburn to a new high at 90 featured the motor group. Public utilities moved within rather narrow and irregular limits.

In the mining group, Kay Copper was again suported around 50 cents a share, but large offerings were absorbed around that level.

RICHMOND LIVE STOCK.

Richmond, Feb. 10.—HOGS—Receipts moderate; early sales, 12.75@13.00 for good to choice Southern hogs.

CATTLE—Receipts moderate; market tends steady with veal top unchanged at 14.00.

SHEEP—No receipts reported.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Realizing attracted by yesterday's advance was considered chiefly responsible for reactions in the cotton market today. The disposition to take profits on recent purchases probably was promoted by the uncertainty of pending far relief legislation, and there may have been some selling for local and Southern account. On the whole, however, offerings were not heavy, and after selling off to 13.96 for May contracts, or 21 points net lower, the market rallied several points in late trading. May closed at 14.08, the general market closing steady, at net declines of 7 to 10 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 to 4 points in response to rather easier Liverpool cables. There was some Southern selling here, presumably in the way of hedging, and the market became rather unsettled in early trading. Washington advices emphasizing a possibility that if the farm relief bill was passed by Congress it would be vetoed by the President, appeared to attract a good deal of attention and probably led to reselling by recent buyers. A disposition to even-up commitments also was promoted by the approach of the two-day adjournment. There was considerable liquidation on the decline which extended to 13.75 for March and 14.37 for October or about 16 to 21 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

The volume of selling tapered off at these figures, however, and there were partial recoveries later on reports of continued steadiness in the Southern spot markets. Unsettled weather in the Southwest, suggesting further delays in harvesting late cotton, or early plowing operations, also had a tendency to check selling after the early liquidation had subsided. Some early sellers were credited with covering late in the afternoon. Last prices showed recoveries of 7 or 10 points from the lowest.

Private cables said trade calling and absorbed hedging in Liverpool but that there had been London and continental liquidation.

Exports today, 24,873, making 6,977,361 so far this season. Port receipts, 28,967. U. S. port stocks, 2,903,805.

MERTON SAYS THAT WILLIAMS TOLD HIM TO REVISE CLAIM

liams, he recounted, told him his claim—based on a debt owed by the Societe Suisse—should be revised, this part of the claim left out and the sole basis of the claim made non-enemy ownership.

Then Merton went back to Germany, got the essential papers and returned to America. After some delay he went to Washington, where Smith had already taken his claim papers. He put up at the Shoreham hotel, he said, next door to "The Little House in H Street," where Daugherty and Smith were living, and only a short distance from the Department of Justice building.

Without being questioned further about the validity of his claim, Merton said Smith told him the claim was passed.

In the meantime, Merton testified, an agreement was made between Merton and King that King should be paid 5 per cent of the total of the claim as a contingent fee for services in obtaining payment. Merton also testified he gave King a "retainer" of $50,000 before returning to Germany.

After the claim was passed Miller returned to New York. At his invitation (Miller) Smith and King came to the Ritz-Carlton hotel, the night of September 30, 1921, to have dinner with him. As Miller took his seat he handed Merton two checks that totaled $6,453,-977.97. The three sat at the table and drank two bottles of champagne. Then Merton presented to each of his guests a gold cigarette case, for which he paid "at least $200, and I dare say more."

The next day, Saturday, October 1, 1921, King went with Merton to Goldman, Sachs & Co.'s offices and Merton gave him $391,000 in liberty bonds. The last Metron saw of King, the then national Republican committeeman from Connecticut, was waving adieu from a taxi with one hand, while the other held a package containing $391,000 in negotiable bonds.

By previous witnesses, the government contends it has shown that by following the trail of these bonds by their serial numbers, $140,000 were traced to the accounts of Daugherty in the Midland National Bank at Washington Court House, Ohio, of which his brother, Mal S. Daugherty, is president. Likewise, $40,000 were traced to the brokerage and banking accounts of Miller in New York and Wilmington, Del. Smith, the government contends, also got some.

Merton was on the stand three hours when the government announced it was through with him. At the last trial he testified virtually six days. His testimony today was interrupted by numerous objections made by Aaron Sapiro, counsel for Miller. Once Sapiro halted the trial while he asked the court to prevent Kenneth Simpson, an assistant United States attorney, signalling to Merton on the stand. United States Attorney Buckner, who was examining Merton, stood aside and glared at Sapiro, who asserted that each time Merton was uncertain about the chronologic order of his testimony, he was coached by nods and other gestures by Simpson.

When defense counsel asked that they be allowed to cross-examine Merton at a later time, Judge Knox ruled they would have to examine him tomorrow, either at the morning or afternoon session. The validity of Merton's claim was not touched by the government, Buckner contending its validity was immaterial to the government's case.

Two new witnesses were called in the trial today.

Elizabeth Miller, telephone operator in the Department of Justice building when Daugherty was Attorney General, took the stand and told of frequent telephone calls between Daugherty and King in the spring and summer of 1921.

Pressed for a definition of "frequent," Miss Miller said the calls were almost daily. Sometimes, she said, Daugherty would call King in New York or Bridgeport, Conn., and sometimes King would call Daugherty.

The witness did not know the purport of conversations over the phone. She said that as soon as she was certain a call was properly "through" she would "plug herself out."

Gladys Weeks, another telephone operator, corroborated testimony given by Miss Miller. Neither testified at the first trial. Their testimony was adduced to show the friendlines of King and Daugherty.

The government, for proof of alleged conspiracy, depends upon inferences the jury may draw from testimony showing that Daugherty, Miller, Smith and King were friendly, that they met and conversed frequently and that they had opportunity to conspire. The testimony was admitted, under objections, solely in regard to Daugherty.

Louis J. Bailey, of Atlanta, the first witness of the day, told of finding Jess Smith in charge of Daugherty's inaugural in March, 1921. Shortly after Daugherty was installed Smith came to Bailey's office. Bailey was then chief of the bureau of investigation of the Department of Justice. Smith told him to station guards about the Department of Justice building, Bailey said, because a socialist leader, then a prisoner in Atlanta, was to be brought in and it was feared his followers might start a disturbance.

Charles Sondberger, clerk of the Department of Justice, testified that Smith had an office on the sixth floor of the Department of Justice building, and that employes took orders from him. Smith, he said, was not an appointed employe of the department.

panies in which the Secretary was financially interested, something which Mr. Mellon refused to do.

Senator Watson's statement, also off the record, declared he had no recollection of having written such a letter and said he could make no comment on it until he had been able to locate it in his correspondence files and refresh his memory regarding the letter and the circumstances surrounding its writing.

Visited Couzens at Capitol.

Commissioner Blair in his testimony at the hearings told of having visited Senator Couzens at the Capitol and of having asked the senator to sign a waiver which would permit the government to reopen the case should it desire to do so after the expiration of the five-year limit fixed in the statute of limitations. The request was made in March, 1925, four days before the expiration date, and was refused.

Senator Couzens had been informed of the government's possible intention to reopen the case because he would be called on to pay $10,000,000 of the additional $31,000,000 levy, it was explained.

The testimony of both Mr. Blair and Mr. Nash was brief. Turning aside from their efforts at the purity of motives which prompted reopening of the case, counsel for the stockholders, of whom Joseph E. Davis is the spokesman, won out in a battle with Mr. Gregg against admission of several official documents from the Treasury Department files, in which the value of the stock as originally fixed by the government was approved by government tax experts.

This is the second of the two principal points in the fight of the stockholders against the government assessment. It is their contention that having placed a valuation on the stock once and permitted the owners to dispose of it on the basis of that valuation, the government had no right to reopen the question. That is their first point, and explains the effort to question the sincerity of the later additional assessment.

In the letters and memoranda placed in the record yesterday, reposed proof that all of the facts which later supposedly prompted the government to reopen the case were known to government officials three or four years before. A memorandum from Chairman Johnson, of the government tax committee on appeals, was among the documents introduced, to the keen pleasure of the stockholders' counsel.

The valuation fixed by Assistant Commissioner of Internal Revenue P. S. Talbot, in 1919, at $9,489.34 a share for the Ford stock, Chairman Johnson's memorandum, which was written in September, 1922, said was fair both to the taxpayer and the government and the case should be closed. This judgment and recommendation was supported by C. A. Maples, solicitor of the Treasury, it was shown.

Other letters and memoranda were introduced along similar lines, all designed to show that the entire case had been gone over by Treasury tax experts and internal revenue officials several times after the stock was sold by the minority stockholders to Henry Ford in 1919 for $12,500 a share and had met with approval so far as the question of proper valuation and consequent taxes paid were concerned.

Say Documents Disprove Blair.

Counsel for the stockholders declared that these documents disproved Mr. Blair's statement in his letter to Senator Couzens, in March, 1925, that there appeared to be nothing in the Treasury Department files to substantiate the accuracy of the 1919 valuation of the Ford plant and stock.

Who will be the first witness to be called by the government when it begins presentation of its case before the board Monday morning was not disclosed. The government undoubtedly will call several of the most prominent bankers of the country in an effort to counteract the testimony of stockholders' witnesses as to the great value of the Ford company as of March 1, 1913.

Mr. Gregg estimated yesterday that the government could complete its case in a week. This probably would result in the ending of the hearings within ten days, after which the board would take the case under advisement. It probably will be two or three months before the board hands down its decision, after which either the stockholders or the government may appeal from the board's decision to the Court of Appeals.

tors Equity association and the Dramatists guild.

The jury of seven would review the play. Its members would consist of five appointed by the arbitration board, representing the public, and two by the theater supervision board, representing the profession. The jury would consider all complaints, but the management and the author might appear at hearings. A play being condemned, the actors would be withdrawn, in accordance with contracts between the manager and members of the Actors Equity association.

Bayonne, N. J., Feb. 10 (By A. P.).—Several hundred persons waited hopefully for hours tonight at the doors of the opera house, while the management made futile efforts to obtain a restraining injunction against a police order which forbade presentation of "The Drag," a sex problem play.

The orchestra gave an impromptu concert while the management tried to obtain an injunction. The audience was ushered out and its money refunded after a wait of 40 minutes.

"Undercover" Fund Is Asked by Mellon

(By the Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon yesterday asked Congress to authorize a special fund for the use of "undercover" prohibition and narcotic agents. With his request he submitted a copy of a proposed bill under which the money would be advanced to field agents by special disbursement officers and would be used to obtain evidence of violations of the Volstead and narcotic acts.

"The use of certain funds as advanced moneys is absolutely essential to the successful enforcement of these laws," he said. An appropriation of $500,000 for such use recently was eliminated from the Treasury supply bill on a point of order that it was not authorized by law.

Wrong Name Cited In Valencia Case

In a story appearing in The Post on Thursday, February 10, 1927, a statement was made that the proprietors of the Valencia cafe, "Joseph and Peter Borras," had consented to a permanent injunction forbidding violation of the prohibition law on the premises by the defendants or anyone in their employ.

The Post regrets to announce that a mistake was made in the naming of the proprietors. Mr. Peter Borras is not connected with the Valencia restaurant, cafe or night club, nor has he ever been, and he was not in any way connected with the proceedings.

3 HURT AS AUTO LOADED WITH LIQUOR RUNS WILD

Crashes Into Two Other Automobiles and Pile of Building Material.

TWO MEN FLEE FROM CAR

Loaded with 550 quarts of liquor, an alleged bootleg automobile yesterday crashed into two automobiles and a pile of building material, injuring three men, one seriously, on the Pennsylvania avenue bridge southeast.

Following a collision with an unidentified automobile, which did not stop, the alleged bootleg car struck a pile of building material, hitting James McClure, 65 years old, 544 Fourteenth street southeast, and Ernest Adams, 51 years old, of Fort Foote, Md., and then virtually demolished an automobile driven by Charles Alger, 3229 Alabama avenue southeast.

Two negroes, who were in the liquor car, took to their heels and escaped. McClure and Adams were taken to the Public Health Service hospital at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, where Adams was found to be suffering from a possible fracture of the skull. McClure was treated for cuts on the eye, shoulder and foot. He was taken to his home. Adams later was taken to Providence hospital where his condition was said to be serious.

Alger was taken to Providence hospital and treated for severe strains in the back and leg.

McClure and Adams were erecting safety stanchions similar to those on Calvert street bridge which are designed to stop motorists from crashing through the guard rail.

WIRING PROTECTION IN ELECTRICAL CODE

Copies of New Regulations, Effective Tuesday, Will Be Available.

Great increases of protection from defective wiring are included in the District's new code of electrical regulations issued yesterday. For several years the supply of copies of the old code has been exhausted and new ones were not printed because it was intended to revise the rules thoroughly. When supervision of the work of the electrical department was added to the duties of Maj. W. E. R. Covell, assistant to the engineer commissioner, he undertook to hasten the revision.

Only 100 copies of the code were released for sale yesterday, at 45 cents each, and, for that reason, they were limited one to a customer and buyers were restricted to electrical contractors. There will be a sufficient supply for every purchaser Tuesday, when the code takes effect, it was announced.

Two ideas dominated in rewriting the regulations, which are now said to be equal to the latest addition of the national electrical code of the national board of fire underwriters. The ideas were the making of a more general use of electricity by consumers without expensive alterations and safety from fire hazard or electric shock.

He said the alleged peculations of Popkins probably would reach $1,100, as his firm had made good checks for that amount.

Popkins had been an employe of the bank for years. He resigned in August, 1925, and the alleged shortages were discovered soon after. After auditing of the books, Popkins was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Jean Dinger, of the Department of Justice.

MARENO, AT BUSCH TRIAL, IS DECLARED MENTALLY UNSOUND

Accused Youth Could Be Led Into Wrong, Defense Alienist Testifies.

IDENTIFIES REVOLVER AS ONE USED BY SELF

Other Gun Fired by Eagles, He Testifies; Acquired in Holdups.

A two-fold defense was offered yesterday by Samuel Mareno, 19 years old, who is fighting for his life in criminal court No. 2, in connection with the death of Patrolman Leo W. K. Busch.

The young Italian, John Cline Proctor, Nicholas Lee Eagles and John F. McCabe are charged with the murder. Patrolmen Busch and Frank L. Ach were wounded in the Grant circle gun battle last September 26, and Busch died two days later.

Admitting that he participated in the firing, Mareno testified he shot only in protection of his own life. With the jury absent later in the day, Dr. Kenneth W. Kinney, a mental disease specialist, declared his examination of Mareno disclosed the defendant was of unsound mind, possessed the faculties of an 8-year-old child and, although he could distinguish right from wrong, he could be led easily into the execution of wrong deeds.

Throughout the morning session Mareno occupied the witness stand, and in clear broken-English phrases, related his version of the gun battle. His words condemned Proctor and fanned the flame of bitterness which has sprung up between the Italian's and Proctor's counsel. McCabe was aided by the testimony.

Identifies Two Guns.

Mareno identified two revolvers, saying one was used by him and the other by Eagles in the battle. The revolvers, he said, were acquired in a series of gasoline station robberies in nearby Virginia a week before the murder. James B. Archer, attorney for Proctor, prohibited the witness from naming his companions in the robberies.

The scene of the narrative then was shifted to the home of Eagles, 316 C street northwest, the night before the fatal fray. Mareno, Eagles, Mrs. "Hal" Eagles, Miss Gladys James, Harris Atcheson and James Callan were present when Proctor came to the house, the witness said, about 8:30 o'clock. Proctor's request of Eagles to lend him a gun was refused and caused Proctor to exclaim, "If it wasn't for me you wouldn't have any guns," Mareno related. Callan displayed a nickel-plated revolver and refused Proctor's offer to purchase it.

Proctor went out and came back about 12:30 o'clock, Mareno related. He engaged Atcheson and Callan in conversation and then talked to Eagles. "He said he had something good on—20 cases of 'red' coming in the road," the Italian said. Eagles refused to "hijack" the liquor unless Mareno accompanied them, and they finally went to the car outside, where McCabe was seated in the rear "very drunk," according to Mareno.

Holdups Are Described.

At length the Italian described the holdups which were staged on the Baltimore pike a few hours later. Mareno said he, Eagles and Proctor engaged in the robberies. Proctor had denied participation on the stand. Finally they returned to this city and were approached by Busch and Ach at Georgia avenue and Upshur street and led back on Upshur street to show the policemen their disabled car. During the walk Proctor passed the word: "Let's shoot our way out," Mareno said.

When the policemen announced their intention of arresting them, Mareno said Ach grabbed him and McCabe. Busch started for the other two, when Eagles shouted, "Stick 'em up!" and Proctor fired at Busch. The four defendants ran forward, he said, and he was shot in the leg by Ach before he could get his gun from a tightly strapped position in his belt.

He ran around the prostrate Busch and emptied his revolver at Ach, who was described by the witness as "running back toward Georgia avenue." Asked why he directed his fire at Ach, Moreno said, "Because I thought he was going to kill me." He witnessed two flames spurt from Proctor's gun, Mareno said. He then was asked, "Who wore the raincoat?"

"The man in the raincoat" previously had been described as the one who shouted "Stick 'em up!" and fired the first shot. With apparent reluctancy the Italian slowly answered "Eagles." Proctor had denied participation in the shooting, and testimony which tended to show he participated was strongly objected to by Archer. After relating of his discovery in the home of Mrs. Catherine Vogle and capture, Martin O'Donoghue, his counsel, offered Mareno for cross-examination.

Would Use Confessions.

George D. Horning, jr., government counsel, attempted to use the confessions the Italian made to police to impeach his testimony, but was halted when Mareno's counsel objected to the voluntariness of the statements and the mental condition of the accused, and cross-examination was delayed.

Justice William Hitz elected to hear testimony, in the absence of the jury, which would tend to show Mareno's mental deficiency. Joseph W. Sanford, clerk and probation officer of the juvenile court, was called to testify concerning the report made to the court of Mareno's mental deficiency when he was a child. His testimony was objected to by counsel for the government and Proctor. He will be recalled today to produce court records showing the deficiency.

Dr. Kinney then was called to the stand. His testimony was generally technical and court adjourned before cross-examination of the witness by Archer and government counsel was completed.

Third Effort Made For Deeds Building

Hope of District officials for a new building, south of the present District building, into which to extend the housing of municipal departments expired when the bureau of the budget refused to approve acquisition of the block. As a result the commissioners abandoned their effort and yesterday sent to the bureau a bill for authorization of a new structure, including purchase of a site, to house jointly the recorder of deeds and the municipal and juvenile courts.

It will be the third time the building for a recorder of deeds has been authorized, if Congress passes the bill. The last bill contained no authorization for buying a site. The measure now proposed calls for expenditure of $900,000, of which $250,000 is for land.

Wife Withdraws Suit.
